POLITICS THIS YEAR.

Although there is no national political canvass this year, politics is coming to the front because of the interest taken in State campaigns.

Elections are to be held in quite a number of States, but it is to New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Virginia, that the country is look- brother with the deepest regret, ing with most concern.

Democratic papers of New York a sert that the Empire State will certainly be permanently fixed in the ties and glories of that better Democratic column this fall, because world with the ransomed people of of the ever increasing demand for God beyond the river-tariff reform. In Ohio the Democrats are confident. Foraker is the candidate of the Republican party for Governor, for a third term, and the disafection in the ranks of his own party is very considerable. Especially is this the case with the colored men who have issued a call for a State convention of colored voters of Ohio, to be hold in Toledo, on September 10th and 11th, to consider the political situation. The signers say: "We belive that it is expedient to call a convention of our race to consider the many political grievances that now hinder our to consider the denials of recognition in the townships and municipal government of the State, and the last four years in the State against our race; in the public inby the present administration, of which Governor Foraker is its head. The political barriers, difficulties and problems that stand in our way can never be solved successfully by our race until parties are brought to know the uncertainty of where and how the negro will cast his bollot. In other words it is our duty to divide under the present mand." The Ohio Democratic Convention met at Dayton yesterday, and the nomination of Campbell is clearly foreshadowed. He is popular with the masses, and strong in debate. Foraker is the great "shrieker," and "bloody-shirt waiver." His campaign material is worn out. Campbell will, in all probability, questions and State issues, with an encouraging prospect of succes.
