MR. CARLISLE thinks that McKinley, of Ohio, will be the next Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PENNSYLVANIA is in line. Her Democratic State Convention adopts a platform for tariff reform, and demands free raw material.

A FIERCE encounter took place September 3, near Suakim between a detachment of friendly tribes and a body of Dervishes, in which the former were routed with terrible slaughter.

THE New York World has a cartoon representing Cleveland and Hill both trying to mount the horse "Democracy." If the World had been looking through ordinary glasses it would have seen Cleveland in the Saddle.

THE Grand Army veterans met last week in Milwaukee and were treated to beer, but next year they will meet in Boston and be treated to beans. The quality of hospitality in this country is somewhat governed, as will be seen, by longitude.

It is true, as a general thing, that the shallow murmur and the deeps are dumb, but even the deeps grow a little when a storm is approaching. This is said in behalf of the great and only Southern Republican party, the mutterings of whose discontent grow more and more audible.—Charlotte Chronicle.

OHIO Democrats have answered general expectation and gratified a wide spread hope in nominating James B. Campbell for Governor. Mr. Campbell is a broad, conservative, sagacious Democrat, popular in every place where he is known and best liked by those most intimate with him. There is no one in that State better calculated to unite all the forces that will fight to defeat Foraker.—New York Star.

THE time has passed for farmers to depend on muscle and hard labor alone. They must do more thinking and planning if they desire to receive the best results. The lawyer studies law. The doctor medicine. The merchant must study commerce; the laws of supply and demand. Just so the farmer must study farming.—American Farmer.

It is quite amusing to see a long dissertation in Administration organs on "Civil-Service difficulties." The only Civil-Service difficulty that besets this Administration arises from its physical inability to make places fast enough at Uncle Sam's corn-crib to satisfy the appetite of the "lean and hungry Republican abjects."—New York World.

INTERESTED inquiry is being made up and down the land for an organization once known as the Interstate Commerce Commission, which, it was advertised, was going to run the railroads of this country in a highly successful manner, but which, it is feared, has caught its foot in a frog somewhere and been run over by a gravel train.—Washington Post.

THE opinion of the most observant of New York business men is that the business season just beginning will be a most prosperous one. All indications point to a good business year. The increase in the price of iron is regarded as a good sign and the immense crops of corn, hay and fruit, not to mention other crops, give promise to the transportation lines of abundant freight. Nothing can prevent the highest state of progress except the operation of an unjust and most injurious war tariff, which must necessarily retard industry and enterprise to a very considerable extent by keeping mills closed, wages low and the price of many of the necessities of life too high.—Norfolk Landmark.

Do not forget the Fayetteville centennial. The people of that hospitable and enterprising town are working with their accustomed zeal and energy to make it a grand success; but they ought to have financial aid from the State at large. This is not to be a mere local affair, but the celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the ratification of the Constitution of the United States by the State of North Carolina. Remember this, and contribute something to make the occasion one never to be forgotten. A comparatively small sum given by each county will make a handsome aggregate, and will enable the managers to make a demonstration worthy of the occasion. The crowd in attendance will be immense. Thousands will go to see the honored ex-President of the Confederate States, who, it is said, will certainly be there.—Wilmington Star.

LOCAL NEWS.

Baseball at 4:30
The Farmers' Alliance of Craven county was in session at the court house yesterday.

Several dray loads of pine straw bagging were seen on the street yesterday. The demand for this bagging far exceeds the supply.

The dwelling house of Mrs. S. A. Churchill, on Pollock street is being very much improved in appearance by the paint brush.

Mayor Williams has been up Trent river to the quarries and secured about 60 tons of shell rock, which will be used on our streets. A good move.

The funeral of Miss Sallie E. Faison will take place from the Methodist church this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The friends of the family and public are invited to attend.

Several negro boys were before the Mayor yesterday charged with disturbing the congregation at John Johnson's church. Two of them were found guilty and fined. Disturbing religious services is a serious offence.

The macadamized road is now completed. The work seems to give general satisfaction. The road is an excellent drive of about a mile and a half and is a great improvement to the city. Our people will use it and appreciate it.

The first and second nines, baseball clubs of this city, will cross bats this afternoon at the fair grounds at 4:30 o'clock sharp. The rivalry between these clubs is very close and an interesting game may be expected. Admission 10 cents.

In this issue will be found a card from Mr. W. P. Burrus, a member of the board of city council. We are informed that there was an effort to inject some beautiful adjectives into the resolutions passed by the Atlantic Fire Co., but the firemen almost unanimously ruled them out. There must be a mad man around here without a free pass. The Raleigh Call will please note these little incidents.

Shipping News.
The steamer Annie of the E. C. D. line sailed yesterday with a cargo of lumber, naval stores, etc. The Eagle of this line will arrive today.

The steamer Howard arrived from Trenton yesterday.

The steamer Stout of the Clyde line, arrived from Baltimore yesterday morning.

Stockholders Traig.
The A. & N. C. Railroad will run a stockholders train leaving Goldsboro for Morehead City at 4 a. m. next Thursday.

The schedule and time table were sent in last night too late for this issue. It will appear tomorrow.

Accident.
We regret to note a serious accident to Mr. R. N. Duffy, which happened yesterday. He was standing on the sidewalk in front of his store, about to turn on the water from the hydrant, when his attention being suddenly attracted he turned quickly about and fell, breaking his leg just above the knee. This is the same leg that was broken some time ago, but from which he had recovered.

Mayor's Court.
The following cases were disposed of yesterday:
Martha Gurganus, loud and boisterous language, dismissed.
Colored—Tenny Chadwick, boisterous language, dismissed; Henry Casey and Douglas Daniels, disturbing public worship at church, fined $5 and cost; Tobe Hyman, for same offence, case continued; James Havens, disorderly, continued.

Danger.
We call the attention of the authorities of either the city or the Railroad to the danger attending people crossing the railroad track on the macadamized road. Something should be done to protect persons driving on the road or their will be serious accidents. Already there have been two narrow escapes and there would be more but for the man who has been stationed there on the tram road, who says that every day he is obliged to give warning to some one. He will be removed now and there will be absolutely nothing to warn or protect drivers.

Personal.
Mr. Lochlan Vaas left yesterday for school at Charlottesville, Va.
Miss Sadie Vaas has returned from Virginia.
Mrs. A. J. Scarborough, and little daughter Facie Belle, have returned from their summer vacation.
Rev. Dr. Vaas returned from Orange Presbytery last night. Part of an interesting communication from him appears today. The remainder will appear tomorrow.

The following passengers left on the steamer Manteo yesterday: Dr. R. S. Primrose, for New York; E. K. Bishop, Baltimore and New York; A. C. Townsend, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Cuthbert and Mrs. Rhodes, New York; Miss Dita Roberts, Boston; J. R. B. Carraway and wife, Norfolk; J. P. Broden and M. C. Giddens, of Trenton, for New York; James Redmond, Baltimore. We noticed two coops of fine chickens on board. Capt. Southgate will see that the passengers fare sumptuously.

Change of Opinion.
The Raleigh Call in its article last Monday, which was remarkable for its lack of correct information, stated that it had information that there had been a change in this section in favor of Mr. Bryan.

A prominent farmer in this county stated to us yesterday that while a good many farmers in this county signed the Bryan petitions, which were peddled through this county a few months ago, they did it largely under misrepresentations, and carelessly (as such things are too often done) and that he had heard scores of those who had signed these petitions regret their action and wish their names off of them. He further expressed the opinion that if it were to do over, with the lights before them, not one farmer in ten who had signed them would now do so.

All the evidence of those in a position to know whereof they speak confirms the opinion that the opposition to Mr. Bryan has constantly increased and intensified, until (except where railroad patronage has been strenuously exerted) it is all but unanimously against him.

A Card.
EDITOR JOURNAL:—After reading resolution of thanks tendered Mr. Washington Bryan passed by the city council I find, to my surprise, resolution as published are an endorsement of Mr. Bryan. The Mayor recommended the resolutions and I gave special attention to the reading of them and failed to hear "able, efficient and popular." I went to see Mayor Williams and he says he read them as published.

There were five Democratic members present including myself. Two of the other members say as I do, that "able, efficient and popular" they did not hear. One says he cannot say, the other is out of the city.

I seconded the resolutions as offered, and do not think any one will believe I would second a motion endorsing the actions of Mr. Bryan.

Please insert this and will try and not trouble you again upon this subject.

[COMMUNICATED]
The partiality of friendship has so frequently adorned with panegyric the memory of those who have fallen before the Great Reaper, that eulogy of the dead rarely passes unsuspected; but if a virtuous life, one of uncommon sweetness and purity, furnish evidence of worth, eulogium would not be, we believe, deemed misapplied of the subject of this communication.

The late melancholy occurrence which robbed our society of one of its most cherished members, Miss Ann Maria Slover, so speedily following the loss of her sainted sister, has sunk many in deep affliction for the heavy blow, and although
"Like a shadow thrown softly and sweetly from a passing cloud, Death fell upon her,"
it yet came at last, with unutterable distress. Partaking largely of the sorrows of those whose loss is irreparable, we cannot let the occasion pass by without some expression of the feelings which such a sad event is calculated to elicit.

That "in the midst of life we are in death," is a solemn and affecting truth, attested by every day's melancholy experience. When we cast our eyes around us, what do we behold? Desolation and death! Visit "Cedar Grove," the home of our dead—this house of deep forgetfulness, where strife is buried and peace reigns—what do we find beneath and around us? The ashes of our fathers and the bones of our friends; the remains of those we loved and revered are here; the companions of our youthful years; the partners of our joys and the soothers of our sorrows. Look there, we find the monument itself mouldering into ruins; the hand-writing blotted out; the inscriptions are obliterated; whose dust and ashes that is resting beneath it already unknown. "The things that were have become as though they were not." No traces remain of the glory which has passed away. "The places which once knew them shall know them no more for ever." But amid all this terrible gloom, desolation and death, comes the cheering voice, "I am the resurrection and the life." The greedy earth shall give back its precious dust, all shall live again in imperishable joy, and
"The forms we loved so gladly here
Will reappear."

Returning home, having finished her education at a Northern school, previous to the war, Miss Slover was accorded at once an enviable position in society. Unaffectedly shrinking from prominence under any and all circumstances, yet she was carried along by other ladies of intellectual capacity until we find her at the head of committees at our Fairs and in our societies and other places where she conceived her aid would benefit our citizens. The writer has not forgotten under the strong protestations in which she was induced to serve, when she was acting as vice-regent, as chairman of a committee of our most intelligent ladies to make arrangements for the reception of the Hon. Edward Everett for the delivery of his Washington Address, and with what ease and dignity she performed the task. It was a place at the time calculated to embarrass one with much more experience. But as before said such positions she did not covet or desire. From her kindness of heart as much pain as they gave her she was induced to fill them to oblige others.

In Miss Slover were happily blended that mildness of temper and dignity of deportment, that unaffected modesty and high intelligence, that exquisite good humor and strength of understanding which we seldom meet in the same individual. To her parents she was all that gives ecstasy to paternal affection. "The tender and silken thread of her life was inwoven with purple and gold." She lived in their shadow and her pulse ever beat in unison with their own; she was the dazzling light in the circle of her own family.

To her other accomplishments was added sincere, humble and unaffected piety. While ever genial and cheerful in society and especially among friends, yet at home she realized her happiest hours. In the midst of her flowers she was a genius—a queen indeed in the floral kingdom, and as the poet so sweetly and beautifully sang so sung she always—
"Your voiceless lips, O Flowers, are living preachers,
Each up a pulpit, and each leaf a book,
Supplying to my fancy numerous teachers,
From lovliest nook."

"Floral apostles, that in dewy splendor
Weep without woe and blush
We shout a crime,"
O may I deeply learn and ne'er surrender
Your love sublime."

Quietly and stealthily in her garden sometimes she would toil for exercise. How often there has she watched with eager delight the expansion of her spotless lilies and then seen its petals folded up droop and fall. With what interest has she beheld the bursting of the rosebud, its leaves unroll and then drop as softly to the earth as the flying snowflake. Typical of her own life and end, so sweetly did she live and so gently did she fall and pass away from earth, and it may be to endless fields of heavenly flowers that neither winter nor die.

And now all is over and forever gone, save the example of the lovely character bequeathed to us as a priceless legacy. The memory of the measured step will ever be before us, and the soft, sweet voice like notes from a golden harp, will remain on our ears. They will not be forgotten. Yes, the affectionate and devoted daughter, the tender sister, the ardent friend, is consigned to the tomb. The flower that bloomed so fair lies withering. "The wind passed over it and it is gone." But we hope and believe the cruel stroke (as it did one as dear who preceded her) has rendered her release from a world of woe, her transit to a blissful immortality. We attempt not to measure the affliction of the survivors. We may mingle our tears with theirs, but we cannot realize their loss.

"Lean not on earth, 'twill pierce thee to the heart—
A broken reed at best, but oft a spear,
On its sharp point peace bleeds and hope expires." W.

A Card.
ED. JOURNAL:—It is extremely humiliating to be brought before Mayor Dick Williams, and adjudged guilty of violating one of the city ordinances, when in truth Mr. Clark and myself were acting as peace makers which was proven by competent witnesses.

The verdict of "his honor" proves an utter and total ignorance of a proper construction, of the law, or a malicious desire to be revenged upon Mr. Clark, for proving conclusively to the public that he (Williams) lied, and that his own character was unassailable. The good people of this city are learning more and more about "Richard Patrick" daily and I for one had rather live among the poor headmen in the Sandwich Islands, than in a community where he now has just a little more authority than he now has. It is against my inclination to come before the public in this card, but in justice to Mr. Clark and myself I am obliged to do so. Yours truly,
HUGH J. LOVICK.

DIED.
Miss Sallie E. Faison at her mother's residence, Friday morning, September 6th, 1889, at one o'clock. Aged 24 years.

Few young ladies in this community had more friends or were more highly esteemed than was she. Many hearts will be made sad by the announcement of her untimely death.

Miss Faison had been from childhood a devoted member of the Methodist church; had for several years sung in the choir, and been an active worker in the Sunday-school. Her bereaved mother and brother have the sympathy of the entire community.

POWELL'S MILITARY SCHOOL.
To the many friends of the Powell's Military School of this city, both white and colored:
We left for Kingston, N. C., Tuesday, Sept. 3, to encamp three days, and we were kindly cared for by white and colored, and the children were delighted and Capt. Dickson made us welcome to the boat and we were treated kindly and good by the agent, Mr. Guion, and the engineer, Mr. Taylor.
