Lectures and Sociables.

The entertainment committee of the Y. M. C. A. propose getting up a series of lectures and sociables during the fall and winter for the benefit of the Association. They respectfully ask the patronage of the public, hoping to make the entertainments worthy the small admission to be charged.

A number of gentlemen have consented to render what assistance they can in giving lectures, which, together with music, recitations, etc., it is thought they may be made sufficiently interesting to keep the Association on a firm and prosperous financial basis.

We notice that a number of good magazines are received at the reading rooms (to the credit of the ladies), but not a sufficient number of illustrated papers. We think our citizens may well aid in this cause if they think it worthy, and if any one doubts that, it is due the Association that they should proving.
