Weber reports nine cases in some detail favorably affected by this treatment.—Medical Record.

LOCAL NEWS.

The cotton market is published on the fourth page.

Very quiet in police circles No Mayor's court yesterday.

A fence is to be built around the yard in front of the theatre.

A strong north wind yesterday morning blew a pretty big swell on Neuse river.

Large wagon loads of home-raised hay still come in the city for market. It has been a fine season for grasses and the farmers have reaped a large harvest.

Much interest was manifested in the services at Hancock street Methodist church last night. There was one conversion. A large number of people were present.

We have been shown a letter from Evangelist Fife, who is now conducting a series of meetings at Reidsville, saying that he will come to New Berne and engage in a union meeting under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. November 26th, if desired.

Mr. James W. Waters and Miss Florence Bryan, both of this city, were married at the residence of the parents of the bride last night by Rev. Dr. Vass. We join the friends of the newly married couple in wishing them all the happiness and prosperity we know them to be deserving.

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS.

From the State Papers.

The newspapers say the Raleigh fair is the best ever held there.

The Cross and White case will come up before the U. S. Supreme court at the October term.

Rev. Sam Jones closed his meetings in Durham last Sunday. He went from there to Lynchburg, Va.

Wilmington Star: Dr. Lorenzo Frink, of Southport, died yesterday morning at his home in that place, aged 77 years.

Raleigh Chronicle: We see it stated that over fifty young men in North Carolina have pledged themselves to go as foreign missionaries. The Y. M. C. A. has wrought a good work in this line.

Goldboro Argus: It is with sincerest regret that we chronicle the death of Mr. W. F. Foldsom, one of Wayne county's best citizens, which occurred at his home in Grantham's township Sunday night, after a confinement of only a few days.

Wilmington Review: Mrs. E. L. Bridges, of this city, has received letters patent for an admirable invention designed by her. It consists of a grate cornice designed to protect mantels from burning or being injured by fires kindled in grates; both the top and sides. It can be made of polished brass or nickel, and is adjustable, so as to fit any grate, and is both ornamental and useful.

Robert Berrier, who murdered his mother-in-law, Mrs. Walker, near Lexington, a few days ago was arraigned for preliminary examination on last Monday. His counsel waived examination and sent the prisoner to jail. A large crowd of citizens from the neighborhood of Mrs. Walker, the woman whom Berrier shot, remained at the jail during the entire evening. As seven o'clock a crowd of masked men came to the jail, broke down the front door and rather than have further damage done to the jail the sheriff gave up the keys. The prisoner was taken by the mob and hanged.

Norfolk Virginian (telegram from Charlotte, N. C.): Nine negro men and three negro women were arrested Saturday night, charged with robberies extending over several months. Over 100 residences and business houses in this city have been raided by these thieves. In one instance $500 worth of jewels were taken from a store, and the losses traceable to the gang aggregate nearly $100,000. The arrests were brought about by one of the gang selling a gold badge which had been stolen. They will be tried this week. Burglary in this State is a capital offense.

Proceedings of State Synod at Charlotte: The new Presbytery formed out of the Eastern portion of Orange Presbytery was ordered to meet in Goldsboro on the fourth Wednesday in November (the 20th day) for organization. The Rev. J. M. Atkinson, D. D., was appointed to preach the opening sermon and to preside till the election of a Moderator. The new Presbytery is to be known as the Presbytery of the Albemarle, by order of the Synod. It begins with bright prospects of opening many avenues of evangelization.

Durham Sun: A very serious accident occurred at Chapel Hill last Tuesday. Mr. Walter Lloyd was accidentally shot in the face by Mr. Andrew Jones. It seems that an old pistol had been lying around in their room, unloaded, for sometime, and Mr. Lloyd had loaded it for some purpose in Mr. Jones' absence. Mr. Jones came in on the day designated and pointed it at Lloyd, saying, "I've got you." Before Lloyd could tell him that it was loaded he was shot in the face.

A COON HUNT.

It is Not What It Is Cracked Up to be by a Jugful.

If there is one thing more than another which is cracked up to be what it is not, it is a coon hunt. To the fortunate individual who has escaped its enthrallment the Talking Machine desires to reveal its iniquity. The first requisite is a dark night—the darker the better. If it can be induced to rain pitchforks the night becomes perfect. You want about a dozen mongrel curs who are more than apt to bite the coon hunter than to attack the coon; a half dozen dorkies to carry pine-knots—and the coon hunter.

No coon hunt is entitled to the name unless the coon can be chased into a swamp. The real ecstasy begins when the whole tea party gets into the swamp after the ring-tailed demon. The deeper they get into the swamp the higher the ecstasy. The writer has been in coon swamps where the ecstasy was up to his chin and everything under five feet in height had to swim up or drown.

A dense undergrowth of brambles and thorn-apple trees, with spikes as sharp as razors and three inches long, adds immensely to the fun. When you have run, walked, crept, tumbled, waded, swam, and climbed till your tongue hangs down on your shoulder, the coon will probably be treed in the biggest, bushiest, gnarliest, toughest old swamp oak in the county. The darkies come into play here. One gets on each side of the tree and chops away. The rest stand around in a circle, hold off the dogs, drink peach brandy and swear. Finally the tree tumbles and the dogs plunge in after the coon. There isn't any coon there, but they plunge in just the same and have a free fight among themselves.

It is a well-settled principle that in the first coon tree which is cut down there is never any coon. Ignorant people who fall to see a reason for cutting down a coon tree unless the coon is in it are silenced by the unanswerable argument that if you didn't cut down the first coon tree there never would be any coon in the tree you did cut down first, and consequently the coons would shortly become extinct. People who are so dull that they can't appreciate the force of the argument wouldn't like a coon hunt anyway, so it doesn't concern them.

The dog which locates the first coon hunt is always kicked for his pains, because there isn't any coon in his tree. As no one is ever at the tree when he locates it except himself and the other dogs, he can be picked out only by the lordly air of proprietorship which he assumes over the tree and a peculiar ferocity of demeanor. He says "this is my meat" as plainly as any dog can.

Sometimes the coon hunt trips up in its attempt to read canine physiognomy, and the wrong dog is liked, but the right one suffers just the same, vicariously, if not otherwise. It doesn't matter much, anyway, for the dog that is kicked would have treed the coon in the same tree if he had not been compelled to stop and chase a family of fleas down off his ridgepole. No dog objects to fleas particularly, but he does hate to have them sit on the roof and give themselves hairs, when they haven't paid a cent of rent since they jumped his quarter section.

Well, the coon hunt progresses. You run till you can't run any further and then the coon goes up a tree again, just to lure you on. It is fun for the coon, but mighty rough on the hunters. There is a succession of runs, rests, tree choppings, and fights. Sometimes you get a coon. The dogs and the coon have an awful good time when the coon is caught. They swap samples and exchange looks of hair. The little dog chooses the rings on the coon's tail, while the biggest dog chews his neck. Catching the coon throws a damper over the whole proceeding. It is so late you can't catch another before morning, while if you hadn't caught him, you could have hunted for two hours more. That is the worst thing about a coon hunt. The coon sometimes allows himself to be caught and it breaks up the fun. The most successful coon hunters are those where you don't get any coon.

With this brief introduction, the Machine will tell a little story. One of doctor Hammond's patients is a young gentleman from Middle Alabama, who owns an immense cotton plantation not far from Selma. He was decanting on the pleasures of plantation life, when doctor Hammond broke in abruptly: "I wouldn't live on an Alabama plantation for the whole State as a gift."

"Ah! doctor," said the young man, playfully, "you never went on a coon hunt, did you?"—Exchange.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 15.—The steamer Minnie Bay, bound from Manchester to Cincinnati with 195 passengers aboard, struck a snag yesterday while rounding at Kramer's Landing, opposite Moscow, Ohio, and sank. The passengers became panic stricken, but the officers and crew lowered boats and yaws and safely transferred all the passengers to shore.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 15.—Messrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Depew, Twombly, Webb and Cox, of New York, arrived here this morning from Newport News, and were entertained by the Westmoreland Club by M. E. Iggalls, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.

RUTHERFORDTON, N. C., Oct. 15.—Walter Fite, five years old, son of Walter L. Fite, fell in a boiler of hot sugar today and was scalded to death.

RALEIGH, Oct. 25.—The largest crowd ever seen at a fair in this State attended the State fair today. The chief attraction was the marriage of Mr. W. M. Bateman and Miss Josephine Nowles, of Washington county. The bride and groom were both attired in costumes of Southern cotton bagging and were attended by four couples all costumed in the same material. Numerous presents were presented to the newly married couple by merchants of the city.

MARION, N. C., Oct. 15.—The jury in the Brown case said not guilty after being out sixteen hours. The State failed to identify the person who killed Page.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 15.—Governor Hill and party, en route to the Atlanta Exposition, arrived here at 2 o'clock today, and a large crowd of prominent citizens was at the station to pay respects to the distinguished party. Gov. Hill and Messrs. Flower, Pearson, Collins, and Spalding made brief addresses. The party left here at 2:15 for Atlanta. When the train stopped for a few moments at Greensboro this morning a large crowd assembled, and calling vociferously for Gov. Hill, he appeared on the platform and made a short talk.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—John L. Sullivan announces that he is ready to fight again, and would like to have a match arranged as soon as possible. He is anxious to meet Jim Smith, and would pay his expenses to America. His next choice of antagonists is Charley Mitchell, but he is ready to meet anybody that will challenge him.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 14.—A Gallitzen (Pa.) special says: Diptheria in its worse form is playing havoc with the lives of our little ones in this place. During the past two weeks the average number of deaths was three or four per day, and the doctors report at least fifty cases down with the disease in town. Four families, with six or seven little ones each one month ago, now are childless from the sweeping fangs that fastened its death dealing substance upon their offspring. A committee has been appointed by the borough council to investigate all cellars and inspect the drainage in order to prevent the ravage.

RAHWAY, N. J., October 13.—What was one of the nearest approaches to a frightful accident in the annals of railroading occurred here this morning to the fast Philadelphia express train on the Pennsylvania railroad, due here at 11:13 p. m. The train is made up of two combination parlor cars and three coaches, and runs at a high rate of speed. It passed the main depot here today four minutes late, running at the high rate of sixty miles an hour. The engine, just as it reached the east end of the long bridge east of Main street, jumped the track, and was followed by five cars. The crash, as the whole train left the track, was terrific, and was heard by people at the depot, a quarter of mile west of where the accident occurred. The train ran along the ties for two hundred feet, when the couplings broke between the cars, and each car took a shoot in different directions, tearing up the rails and ties and digging into the stone-ballast roadbed. There are four tracks at this point, and the cars were twisted around in such a way as to completely wreck the roadbed and the cars themselves.

When the cars had finally been stopped the passengers, who were naturally badly frightened, came out of the wrecked cars, unable to comprehend what had happened. The most remarkable thing is that although the train was running at sixty miles an hour the only persons injured were two ladies, who were out by flying glass.
