RAMBLES ABOUT TOWN.

The reference to "Carl and his schoolmates." etc , in yesterday's article, calls to mind a letter received from a little boy who resides in the "hilly country." He states, "it is a desolate kind of a place; there is nothing in the woods there that bites and scra ches, or any where else about there, except dogs and cats, when they fight, and boys." Hs begs for more bear stories. Sitting talking with Daniel Stimson at his mill about the time the boy's letter was received, Mr. Mallison happened to be passing in the street, and he was stopped and the information given him. 'Well," he replied, "the bear stories are not quite exhausted. I can add a few to shoee published. A bear," he continued, "came a few nights since within seventy-five yards of my house for water, and I have seen the tracks in my fields, though I have killed none of this city, but now of Ocracoke, to lately. A colored man tiled a gun on Miss Lena Mattocks. the lakes last week and killed two. I saw the mest for sale at Croatan station, and I learn it is now frequently in the Newbern market. "But now for a clincher for the boy, and he should have been there to ride with them. I was informed by two farmers of integrity that they came recently across a she bear in the woods, who had her two cubs on a bent sappling, and she standing on her hind feet swinging them up and down with her

Mr. Stimson and the writer both cried

'tough!" Mr Mallison replied: "That is tender, to this; hear me: A sow was put in a pen near the lakes in the woods. A bear, taking the scent, came out of the pocosin, reared up on the pen, and peeping over, beheld a hog, a mere a corn field near at hand, gathered an armfull of corn, and returning to the pen threw it in and walked off in disgust. But it was not known whether the bear had quit the drag or designed fattening his own pork out of the field of the owner of the hog."
"Well, I declare," said Mr. Stimson.

'that bear should not be molested;' and the writer concurred.

It is due to Mr. Mallison to state here that he would not vouch for the truth of the latter story, and that he denied the ownership of the poor pork. How ever, his known integrity, courtesy and hospitality would clear him of any suspicion in the matter. To sum up, we be lieved (that is. Mr. Stimpson and the writer) that Mr. Mallison thought the first swinging story the fact, the second doubtful, and that if he was the owner of the hog in the pen it will never be known.

Referring to bear meat, the first bistorian of North Carolina, Lawson, Mrs. James A. Bryan, Mrs. Nelson and says: "The flesh of this beast is very Mrs. Roulack arrived in the city from good and nourishing, and not inferior to the best pork in taste. It stands betwixt beef and pork, and the young cubs are a dish for the greatest epicure living. I prefer their flesh before any beef, veal, pork, or mutton, and 'they look as well as they eat, their fat being as white as snow and the sweetest of any creatures in the world. If a man Barrington & Baxter. drink a quart thereof, melted, it never will rise in his stomach.

The old historian is correct as to the looks of bear, and as to the taste, we are satisfied with the assertion. He states that he learns that panther meat s "hard to down," and so would be bear meat with some, notwithstanding the sweetness of its fat.

Lawson, though generally conceded as aiming at truth, has given some rather "tough" fish stories, and as the writer designs furnishing one to which he would respectfully call the attention of the Hon. T. J. Jarvis, he will give "There is the others precedence. "There is another sort of these whales or great fish," observes the historian, "though not common. I never knew of above one of that sort, found on the coast of North Carolina, and he was contrary to all others ever found before him; being sixty feet in length, and not above three or four feet in diameter. Sometimes Indians in America will go out to ses and get upon a whale's back and peg or plug up his spouts and so kill him." Pretty good, isn't it, for a new North Carolinian ?

During the last fair in Newbern, the writer happened to mention to Gov. Jarvis, the size of a turtle caught at Beaufort, when he held up both hands with the exclamation, "I could soon believe Jonah swallowed the whale." Here is the proof which at the time could not be adduced. The following is an extract from a letter to the editor of the Centinel, Newbern, dated Beaufort, N. C., May 23, 1822:

desirable locations in the city of New "A turtle of a very ucommon kind was caught last week, by the whale and porpoise men, in one of their shark nets. It is 7 feet 3 or 4 inches in length, and from the end of one fin to the other, in width, is 9 feet, and 2 8 12 feet through the body. The back is black, which with his sides, are in 8 squares; the under part is black and white, and the bill resembles that of the hawk. He died shortly after he was taken, and the skeleton is preserved."

Why not get one for the next fair? turtle seems, see what the world had in

Yet the remains of the fossil whale (B. prison) found on the coast of Ystad, in the Baltic, indicate that the animal, although not more than 50 or 60 feet long, must have had a body 27 times larger and heavier than that of the common or right whale."
