We have received the Columbus Weekly News, published at Chadbourn by S. F. Thompson and edited by J. A. Smith. We welcome the News with genuine good will.

The Fair is over, and we would be happy but for the fact that the Asheville Citizen and Clinton Caucasian have not visited this office recently. Gentlemen, please call again.

The Democrats of Indiana adopted the Australian ballot system. The Republicans are going to appeal to the courts to overthrow it. Under this law there would be no chance whatever to work the blocks-of-five racket in Indiana.—Keokuk Constitution-Democrat.

FROM the commencement of its publication the State Chronicle has been a power in North Carolina journalism. We are glad to be able to state that we are to have a Daily Chronicle. On Thursday, the sixth day of March, the first issue of the State Chronicle as a morning daily will appear.

A GOOD many Kansas farmers, who are now burning corn for fuel say that between grasshoppers and protection they will choose the grasshoppers. Grasshoppers come only once a year but protection come, gets hold with all its claws and claws away all the time.—Wilmington Star.

The singular unanimity with which the Republican party don't want Harrison for a second term is not surprising, but it is rather remarkable, and is rather creditable. While one hears not much said in opposition to his renomination from the party organs, we do hear the loudest kind of actions.—Quincy, Ill., Herald.

"The divinity of Christ, so far from being a dry, abstract, and merely speculative dogma for the intellect to handle, is a concrete, living and infinitely precious reality to call forth the confidence and affections of the heart, losing none of its preciousness because veiled in mystery. We can apprehend and believe the fact, and reap the comfort thereof, even though we cannot explain it. The fact gives us a divine Saviour to love and trust."

"The Bible speaks of the 'full assurance of faith,' meaning thereby a faith that is so confident and positive, so free from doubt, and so firmly fixed on God as revealed in the Gospel of His grace, that it practically amounts to assurance. This is the sort, or rather degree of faith that honors God and at the same time gives the richest experience into the soul. If one wants the comforts of faith, he must exercise the faith that imparts these comforts."

There was only one marriage license issued by the Register of Deeds last week—to a colored couple. There were fourteen issued during the month of February—three to white couples and eleven to colored couples.

JAMES SULLIVAN, colored, was before the Mayor yesterday for violating chapter 5, section 3, of the city ordinances, being drunk and disorderly in the city limits. He was fined $5 and cost of 30 days on the streets with ball and chain.

Mayor Williams and the city police deserve much credit for their cool and determined efforts to bring the gamblers to justice who infested our city during the Fair. There were nearly twenty of them, hailing principally from Petersburg, Va.

"Little Lord Fontleroy" will be produced at the opera house at Goldsboro on Tuesday. Many have been the readers of this story, so beautifully written by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett. A special train will leave here for the convenience of those who wish to attend.

Killed on the Track.

The special Fair train that left New Berne Friday evening for Goldsboro ran over and killed a negro man a few miles above Tuscarora. It was after dark and the train was going at about an average speed. From a wood house the moon cast a shadow across the track immediately where the man was lying. Just before approaching, a dark object was discovered by the engineer but it was too late to take up and the heavy train thundered over him. The train was stopped and backed only to discover the mangled remains of an unknown person. It was afterwards learned that the deceased had been at Tuscarora drunk and wanted a ticket on the train. He did not purchase it and it is supposed that he started out on the railroad walking and fell asleep on the track.

The Fair Closed.

The Fair is over, and all parties are to be congratulated.

The high character of the Exposition was due in a large measure to the efficient officers of the Association, and the patriotic citizens of New Berne and the surrounding country, who with self-sacrificing enthusiasm devoted themselves to the enterprise.

We gratefully acknowledge our indebtedness to the gentlemen of the press of the State for the wide advertisement of the Fair, and their generous words of commendation of the enterprise. No local prejudices were indulged in, but from all sections of our beloved Carolina came expressions of approval and encouragement.

If the past year had been a prosperous one the attendance would have been larger; but, as it was, there were a multitude of people present from New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas—indeed from all parts of our common country.

It is pleasing to chronicle the fact that there was nothing about the Fair to offend the sensibilities of the most refined and cultivated—the most moral and religious.

It is unfortunately true that sharpers, tricksters and gamblers attend fairs and other great gatherings of the people. It was not expected that, at such a time, New Berne would escape their presence, but it is to the credit of New Berne that the nimble-fingered gentry found a lion in their path, and were speedily brought to the bar of justice.

These fairs will continue, from year to year, until Eastern Carolina shall stand before the world revealed in its true beauty, its marvelous resources and wonderful development.

It is impossible to estimate the effect of the late Fair upon the future of East Carolina. The editors of our State papers who were present will fill their columns with the details of the Exposition, while those who came from New York will picture to the North this section as it is, and thus attract to our borders the wealth and enterprise of distant communities.

THE THIRD EXHIBITION

Of the East Carolina Fish, Oyster, Game and Industrial Association.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

The Fish, Oyster and Game department was one of the most attractive features of the Fair. As one entered this building the first thing to attract the eye was the large and fine display of fish and oysters exhibited by Mr. Geo. N. Ives. We have not space to do justice to this exhibit. All who saw it were amazed at the wonderful collection which was so beautifully arranged, and our visiting friends who had seen such displays at the North said it was the finest and most complete ever made in this country. Every variety of fish from the waters of this State were there, as well as the red snapper, grouper, Spanish mackerel, pompano, and other rarities from the far South. Lobsters, crabs, scallops, and the delicate smelt were there in dishes of ice. Fish frozen in blocks of ice made beautiful pictures. Oysters of many varieties and of large size, rivaling the famous Lynn Havens and Cherrystones, were also shown by Mr. Ives. The whole collection was artistically draped with nettings, fish flakes, eel traps, corals, and other fishing implements, furnished Mr. Ives for this occasion by the American Net and Twine Company of New York.

Mr. Haywood Tooker had also a smaller but a very creditable display of fish on the opposite side of the room. He had some very fine shad, black and striped bass, a very large toad fish, and a great variety of others, the names of which we could not learn.

The oysters on exhibition came from Harbor Island (by Mr. Walter Homan), Broad creek, Nelson's bay, Core sound, North river, Jarrett's bay, Pine Point and Portsmouth. The clams were from Beaufort.

TAXIDERMY.

Miss Alice Duffy's display of taxidermy, in the room with the art department and exhibit of curios, was much admired. The representative of Harper's Weekly said that it was "the chief attraction of the Fair." It was, we think, one of the most attractive features. There was a very interesting scene arranged in a large glass case: On the outskirts of the woods, in the tall, thick straw and bushes, three frightened rabbits are squatted as still as mice, but ready at the slightest noise to jump. In the back ground a fox is peering through the bushes at them and slyly creeping upon them. The animals look almost as natural as life. There are a number of beautiful specimens of taxidermy, such as white British owl; a real Connecticut partridge, which is much larger than our "partridge" (quail); a skunk, large horn owl, a beautiful mallard duck, white heron, summer duck, a large eagle. There were also beautiful cards of original design, easter chickens, etc.; game planks mounted with dead game; novel fans exquisitely made; a lamp screen, made of a green heron, which is unique and ingeniously designed. Another scene—broken limbs and vines, with golden-winged woodpecker, swamp sparrow, linnnet, red-winged starling and flying squirrel perched upon the limbs; very pretty. Miss Duffy's exhibit was beautifully and artistically arranged.

There are also included in this exhibit a display of mounted deer horns by Mr. Henry Brown, and a large wolf, mounted in New York, exhibited by Mr. Wm. Hunter, of Goldsboro. This wolf was at the Fair last year alive.

ART DEPARTMENT.

The description of the Art Department being rather hurriedly taken, we deem it worthy of a more extended notice. By far the largest exhibit of this department is that of Miss Nan Roberts, now at Cooper Institute, N. Y., in which she exhibited a large number of oil paintings, water colors, portraits and two very fine tapestries. These tapestries deserve more than mere mention, but space is wanting in which to describe them. The one hung in the northeast corner of the room being Venus Aphrodite in the act of rising out of the sea. The other, Aurora, the goddess of the morning.

Miss Annie Berry's exhibit of china painting is very fine; her lovely screen and painting on silk require especial mention, and the Royal Wooster vase, though the last in the list, is not least in merit.

Mrs. Ellis exhibits a handsome blue silk scarf, one of the finest in the Art Department; also a magnolia study, which is very attractive. The Fruit and Flowers sent by Mrs. Nelson is indeed a work of art. Miss Janet Hollister, the efficient secretary, adds largely to the beauty of the department by her display of crayons, water colors and landscapes in oil, the latter, we think, one of the finest on exhibition. Miss

The Gamblers.

Mayor Williams continued his investigation of the cases of the gamblers yesterday.

Harry Raymond was up for another charge of gambling on the streets. Raymond had a nice little game to work on the unwary. It's called the "three shell game." Three little shells and a ball are used. Raymond would put down the shells with the ball under one of them and then the generous "fake" would bet you five dollars to one dollar that you could not pick up the shell with the ball under it. He was required to give a $200 justified bond for his appearance at the Superior Court.

W. M. Asher and F. J. Hardison, charged with allowing their saloon to be used for gambling purposes, waived examination.

J. E. Justice, Chas. Faulkner and R. Hendrix gave bonds for their appearance at Superior Court.

Samuel Coward, for permitting his saloon to be used for gambling purposes, gave bond for his appearance at Superior Court.

Richard Fraley also worked the "three shell game" and is now in jail, in default of bond.

Three others, one by the name of Earle, one Stevens and one Mallory are wanted.

A fellow by the name of A. Boss was captured at the depot yesterday. He has been skulking about the city for several days. Yesterday evening he attempted to leave on the 6:30 west bound train, but policeman Gaskill was on his track and captured him. Boss ran when Mr. Gaskill approached, but stopped as still as a post when the officer shot at him. He will have a hearing this week.
