THE NATIONAL ELECTION LAW.

Earlier in the session we did not believe it possible for Congress to pass the national election law, but since the passage of the House rules, and the high-handed measures of Reed, with and without rules nothing seems impossible that has for its object the continued ascendancy of the Republican party.

There is now reason to believe that the Republican majority will pass a national election law with a special view to extending the power of the Republican party in the Southern States. The measure will be opposed by Democrats in the House and in the Senate; eloquence will be displayed; hallowed memories will be invoked, and the Constitution will be apothegmatized as the palladium of liberty, but it will be all in vain. Sooner or later we must yield to the inevitable.

What will be the effect of the new law? In general it will be the subversion of States rights and the establishment of consolidation. North Carolina hesitated to adopt the Constitution because she feared that the rights of the States and the liberties of the people were not sufficiently guarded. But no Federalist of that day never claimed for the general government such powers as it is exercising today. If Alexander Hamilton could rise from his grave he would be astounded at the usurpations of Congress.

But it must not be supposed that the special object of the measure will be accomplished. No more is this fair land to be cursed with negro domination. The history of reconstruction shows that even where they were recently vanquished the whites would not submit to the control of the blacks. For years the white men of the South have been obedient to law and the upholders and vindicators of justice and Christianity, and there is no blot on their escutcheon. If they are to be further opposed, they will gather in solid phalanx around the ark of the Constitution and solemnly swear to stand or fall together!

We have never being in favor of pressing the black man to the wall. We are in favor of giving him a fair chance in the battle of life, and awarding to him the prize of any success he may win. But beyond this we will not go.

The effect of the law will be, first, to unite the whites more strongly against the Republican party, by bringing them together more closely in a common cause. Secondly, to create scenes of violence at the Southern polls, which will be seized upon by the Radical press as a means of intensifying the exciting feeling at the North; and finally it must exercise a powerful influence in further alienating the two races.

Whatever the situation the white people of the South will maintain their high character for moderation, conservatism and order.

There will be no chafing, no moody sallies. Since no power has been able to destroy our manhood, nothing can divert us from the path of virtue, justice and honor.

Variety in Tramps.

"Tramps are not all alike," said an old fellow in City Hall Park to a sparrow policeman the other day. He was a man who had traveled all over the world without paying a cent. It was early in the morning and the policeman felt like a chat, so he asked:

"What do you mean?"

"Just what I say—tramps are not all alike. There are rough, ignorant chaps, too lazy to work, who prey on the country for a living. They roam in bands, and are ready for any crime. Again, there is the tramp whom drink or misfortune has brought down from respectable ranks in life, lead the tramps to forget. He works enough to buy his meals, but never stays long in one place, and travels on freight cars from place to place. Then they are the gentleman tramps—men who ride in freight cars, because they believe in paying for nothing. They are cheery and well dressed, and always have money, which they hardly need, as their insufferable gall is sufficient to carry them through anything. They are usually hard drinkers and drift about to see the country. They are always generous to poor bums they meet on the road, and they travel comfortably even on freights."—New York World.
