The Shepherd's Dog—A Lost Child.

A shepherd who inhabited one of those valleys or glens which intersect the Grampian Mountains, in one of his excursions to look after his flock, happened to carry along with him one of his children, a boy three years old. This is not an unusual practice among the Highlanders, who accustom their children, from the earliest infancy, to endure the rigors of the climate. After traversing his pastures for some time, attended by his dog, the shepherd found himself under the necessity of ascending a summit at some distance, to have a more extensive view of his range. As the ascent was too fatiguing for the child, he left him on a small plain at the bottom, with strict injunctions not to stir from it till his return. Scarcely, however, had he gained the summit, when the horizon was darkened by one of those impenetrable mists which frequently descend so rapidly amidst these mountains, as, in the space of a few minutes, almost to turn day to night.

The anxious father instantly hastened back to find his child, but, to his own intrepidity, unfortunately missed his way in the descent. After a fruitless search of many hours, he discovered that he had reached the bottom of the valley, and was near his own cottage. To renew the search that night was equally fruitless and dangerous; he was therefore compelled to go home, although he had lost both his child and his dog, who had attended him faithfully for many years.

Next morning, by break of day, the shepherd, accompanied by a band of his neighbors, set out in search of his child; but after a day spent in fruitless fatigue, he was at last compelled to descend from the mountains. On his returning home to his cottage, he found that his dog, which he had lost the day before, had been home, and on receiving a piece of cake, had gone off again. For several successive days the shepherd renewed his search for his child, and still, on returning home disappointed in the evening, he found that the dog had been home, and on receiving his usual allowance of cake, had instantly disappeared. Struck with this singular circumstance, he remained at home one day, and when the dog, as usual, departed with his usual piece of cake, he resolved to follow him, and find out the procedure. The dog led the way to a cataract at some distance from where the spot where the shepherd had left his child. The banks of the cataract almost joined at the top, yet, separated by an abyss of immense depth, presented that appearance which so often astonishes and appalls the travellers that frequent the Grampian Mountains.

Down one of those ragged and almost perpendicular descents the dog began, without hesitation, to make his way, at last disappeared by entering into a cave, the mouth of which almost level with the torrent. The shepherd with difficulty followed, but, on entering the cave, what were his emotions when he beheld his boy eating with much satisfaction the cake which the dog had just brought him, while the faithful animal stood by, eyeing his young charge with the utmost complaisance. From the situation in which the child was found, it appeared that he had wandered to the brink of the precipice, and then either fallen or scrambled down till he reached the cave. The dog, by means of his scent, had traced him to the spot, and afterwards prevented him from starving by giving up to him his own daily allowance.—N. Y. Ledger.

The Duty of Dressing Well.

It is every woman's duty to dress just as richly as she can afford, and it is as an agent against our artistic advancement as a nation, for her to dress unbecomingly and with disregard for the niceties of the toilet. To say "I do not care anything about dress," is equivalent to saying "I do not care anything about a most important branch of art development," and is by no means evidence of superior mental force. A "dowdy" woman is an offense in the streets and unendurable in the parlor. It is not the attention paid to dress that sensible people ought to object to, but the inattention to proper combination and harmonious outline.—Dress.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients. Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's.

Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.
