Where once the blue brigades were massed,

And gazed upon the plain below, O'er which the charging columns passed,

And sanntering downward somewhat Among the stones no longer stained,

I came upon a little mound That only the front rank had gained :

A little mound left all alone. Unmarked by flower or cypress wreath To show that some regretful heart

Remembered him who slept beneath. But half-way hidden by the grass,

I found a broken barrel stave; -The headboard which some foeman's hand Had kindly placed upon the grave.

And on it traced these touching words, In letters I could scarce divine; 'A rebel name, unknown, who fell First in the foremost line.'

God's peace be with thee in thy rest, Lone dweller in the stranger's land, And may the mould above thy breast Lie lighter than a sister's hand.

On other brows let careless fame Her fadeless wreath of laurel twine. Enough for thee, thy epitaph, "First in the foremost line !"

About the Weather.

So far the Winters of 1889 and 1890 have been pretty much alike. The years 1815 and 1816 were also very mild. I often heard my father talk about those Winters, and in this short article 1 will try and give some of the facts as my father gave them to me. In 1815 very little snow fell in November, and December; in January, 1816, it was mild; the sun was shining most every day during the month. The people thought February would be cold, but that month turned out very warm also, The month of March was cold and stormy. A great many people called the year, a year without a Summer. In April it was very cold; during May the ice was one inch thick on some streams. The fruit tree blossoms and the young corn were frozen. Some farmers built large fires around their fields and the smoke and heat saved some of the young corn. In June snow and ice could be found; vegetables were a failure. When the rye was in blossom, six inches of snow fell, and some farmers took long lines, went across their fields and pulled off the snow. All the farmers that did that got no rye; those who left the snow on got about half a crop. The 4th of July was very cold and windy; on the 5th ice formed on the waters of New York, Pennsylvania and some of the other Eastern States. In August, ice formed half an inch thick; September and October were

Words are insidequate to express the suffering I andured during that time. During these fitteen years of exis-tence (it was not living), I tried every known remedy without receiving any benefit. I finally began on Switt's Specific (8.5.8.), which from the first gave me relief, and to-day I am enjoying the best of health, and an a well man.
