Dr. Gatling, the famous inventor of the Gatling gun, and who was born in North Carolina, is said to have another invention which will revolutionize the manufacture of ice. It is claimed that the new machine will manufacture ice at one tenth of the present cost.

The board of trustees of the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Raleigh have decided to establish a cannery for the purpose of supplying the college with its own canned goods. This is a good move.

It will not only furnish supplies that would otherwise have to be purchased, but it is teaching the young men another occupation. Any institution that will train them for the battles of life is a blessing and deserves the good will and support of the public.

A big work can be accomplished by this college and the future will demand that it be sustained and increased in its volume of work.

Uses of Paper in Japan.

The Japanese use paper at every instant. The string with which the articles you buy are fastened is made of paper. Do you want a piece of string? Tear a sheet of paper, roll it between the fingers; it requires a strong wrist to break it. The partitions dividing the houses are paper! The pane through which an indiscreet eye looks at you is paper! The pane is truly wanting in transparency, or not at all transparent, and the Japanese, especially the ladies, who are just as curious as they are in other countries, are none the less embarrassed to see, without troubling themselves, what is taking place outside. The method is very simple—one finger is passed through the paper; that is all! When one has had a good look, a small piece is stuck on this opening with a grain of rice. The yakonine hat passing is paper; the porter's cloak, who carries his burden, singing a cadence, through the rain; the garment of the boatman who conducts you on board; the tobacco pouch, cigar case—all are paper! Those elegant flowers ornamenting the beautiful hair of the Japanese ladies, and those robe collars which are taken for crape-paper!—American Lithographer and Printer.

A Beautiful Skin.

The plainest features become pretty when clothed with a fresh velvety skin. First of all, one must keep from those unsightly blackheads or grubs. Bathe the parts in hot water; rub on a little oil, and then take an old-fashioned watchkey and pry out all the large ones. Afterward rub on cream or any soothing ointment. In the morning there will be no trace of redness.

To have a clear skin it is essential to keep the digestive organs in good order and sleep as much as possible. Sleep will do more to preserve the freshness of youth than any other one thing. At night, wash the face in warm water—never use hot—using soap freely to remove the dust of the day. Then take a pint of cold water to which a tablespoonful of bay rum has been added, and bathe the face for five minutes. Dry the face on a coarse towel, rubbing gently to get up a pleasant friction. Lastly spread a little cream lightly on the face and neck.

In the morning remove the grease with plenty of warm water and soap—followed by a cold bath as at night.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

K.T. CARSON.

The Famous Kentuckian Who Figures in Border History.

Christopher Carson, or "Kit Carson," as better known to the readers of Western history, was a native of Kentucky and was born on Tate's creek, in Madison county, on Dec. 24, 1809. When young Christopher was seven years old he joined a hunting expedition which initiated him into border excitement, and gave him a taste for the free, wild life he ever afterwards lived. The vast plains of the West had a fascination for him beyond all things else. Like Daniel Boone, he could not stand the smoke of civilization, and he despised its restraints and luxuries. For eight years he was a trapper, and for a similar period he was chief hunter for the garrison at Bent's fort. For almost the remainder of his life, he was guide, scout, and Indian hunter on the Western frontier. He acted as guide to General John C. Fremont, in his celebrated exploration beyond the Rocky mountains in 1842 and in 1843-4, considered at that day one of the grandest achievements of the time. Carson gives the following account of a night attack of Tlamath Indians: "This was the only night in all our travels, except the one night on an Island in Salt lake, that we failed to keep guard. As the men were tired, and as we expected no attack, the Colonel didn't like to ask it of them, but sat up late himself, Owens and I were sleeping together, and we were waked at the same time by the flicks of the ax that killed our men. At first I didn't know it was that, but I called to Basil, who was on that side: 'What's the matter there? What's that fuss about?' He never answered, for he was dead then, poor fellow, and he never knew what killed him, his head had been cut in his sleep, the other groaned a little as he died. The Delawares (we had four with us) were sleeping at the time, and sprang up as the Tlamaths charged them. One of them caught up a gun that was loaded, but although he could do no execution he kept them at bay, fighting like a soldier, and didn't give up until he was shot full of arrows—three entering his heart. He died bravely. As soon as I had called out, I saw it was Indians in the camp, and I and Owens together cried out, 'Indians!' There were no orders given; things went on too fast, and the Colonel had men with him, who didn't have to be told to do their duty. The Colonel and I, Maxwell, Owens, Godey and Stepp jumped together—we six—and ran to the assistance of our Delawares. I don't know who fired and who didn't; but I think it was Stepp's shot that killed the Tlamath chief, for it was at the crack of Stepp's gun that he fell. He had an English half-ax strung to his wrist by a cord, and there were forty arrows in his quiver—the most beautiful and warlike arrows that I ever saw. When the Tlamaths saw him fall they ran, but we lay, every man with his rifle cocked, until daylight, expecting another attack. In the morning we found from the tracks that from fifteen to twenty of the Tlamaths had attacked us. They had killed three of our men and wounded one killed—who scalped the chief, whom we left where he fell. Our dead we carried on mules, but after going about ten miles, we found it impossible to get them any further through the thick timber, and finding a secret place we buried them under logs and chunks, having no way to dig a grave."

The many deeds of this gallant Kentuckian would make up an interesting volume. No braver man ever lived; no more generous heart ever beat in any man's bosom. No call of distress was ever passed unheeded; suffering female innocense never failed to find in him a staunch and earnest champion.

Carson entered the Federal army during the late civil war, and rose to the rank of Brigadier-General, and in 1865 resumed his position as Indian agent in New Mexico, which position he held a number of years before the war. He was one of the pioneer wool growers of the Pacific slope, and in 1853 drove across the plains 6,500 sheep, an enterprise at that time hazardous in the extreme. He died in 1868, in his 59th year.—Courier-Journal.

A Chicago schoolboy, ten years old, excused his absence by bringing to the teacher a note he had himself written and signed with his father's name. Here it is: "Miss—, Please excuse Joey, He was necessity obtained."

The weather is hot enough to kill a valuable mare belonging to C. H. Fowler from her colt, but not hot enough to stop marriages.

Harvey Moore had a horse to kill himself a day or so ago by running away and getting foul in his harness. He reared up, fell backward and finished the job.

Lawrence Miller lost his mare a day or so since by getting hung in her stall and breaking her thigh so she had to be killed. Stephen Harris also lost a good farm pony horse by disease.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind. "I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—look three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." ALDEN'S
Manifold
Cyclopedia

A Cyclopedia of Universal Knowledge, and Unabridged Dictionary of Language in one, 40 handy vols., large type, over 4,000 illustrations. Cloth binding, per vol., 50c., per set $25.00. Half Morocco, per vol., 75c., per set, $35.00.

Vol. 18—Now Ready

The volumes thus far issued will answer more questions in the practical every-day life of the average reader, than all the volumes of any complete cyclopedia in the market. Test them and see! A specimen volume may be ordered and returned if not wanted.

$18.00 cash with order before Nov. 1, will secure the full set of 40 Vols. in the same binding, or $25.00, per set prepaid. Those now ready at once, remainder as issued.

"The price is very low, the form exceedingly handy for a work of reference, and the editing skillful and comprehensive."—Literary World, Boston.

"The literary skill and judicious editorship which have characterized the undertaking from the outset have been in no degree relaxed."—Sun, New York.

"It is an unabridged dictionary and a storehouse of information on almost every conceivable topic. The more we see of the work the more we are pleased."—Educational Monthly, Akron, O.

"The convenient form, the excellence of binding, paper, and illustrations, and the skillful arrangement of articles make this a handy cyclopedia, which will be used ten times where the bulky 'Britannica' would be consulted once. The illustrations are really helpful, and are very numerous. No matter what other cyclopedias a writer may have, 'Alden's Manifold' should be upon his shelves."—The Writer, Boston.

"It is a remarkably well made book for the price. The peculiar shape makes the book extreme easy to read, which is a most valuable thing to the student. The clean cut, heavy faced type used for titles is a good feature and materially lightens the task of the investigator. The accented syllable of every difficult word is plainly marked and the pronunciation, when it offers any difficulties, is set forth phonetically. In a word, this popular work is most carefully edited and neatly and accurately manufactured."—American Bookmaker, New York.
