> The subject requires careful consideration by good-sense men, and practical men who have been identified with the business. The legislative body is entirely unsuited to the task of making laws for the benefit of the oyster business. The failure of our own State to devise a system of laws for the protection and development of the business is proof that it requires a great deal of practical wisdom to frame a body of laws that will protect the industry and give satisfaction to all connected with it. The problem must be considered and worked out for the understand the subject, who will give thought to it and who will frame and suggest to the Legislature such amendments to our present oyster law as may be deemed advisable.
