disastrous day in the history of the Friday New York Central Railroad strike are under the care of surgeons and rive citizens are so badly wounded that there are doubts of their recovery and one was so severely handled by the mob that the police surgeon had to dress his wounds. The trouble was at the Van Woers street crossing a few blocks west of the passenger depot, and where the freight trains run on the bridge.

The Pinkerton men were stoned by boys and roughs and they fired promiscuously into the crowd, and wound ed. among others, an innocent woman

These occurrences aroused the passions of the spectators, mostly rough and hoodlums, as nothing else has since the strike was declared. Their number increased, and the chief of police, fearing further trouble, estabhouse near by, and placed all the reguards have in consequence been with drawn.
