"Christmas time and good cheer are synonymous terms. If there is a period steamer Pamlico, came home to spend in the whole round of the toiling, scheming, sinning world when life Sewms less burden-ome and home joys more real, it is when paterfamilias begins to come home at night with his pockets bulging out with knobby bundles. It is when the youngest boy confers darkly with his mother concerning some secret which has to do with his father. It is when the oldest boy in vain tries to conceal an awkward looking package, six inches one way and seven by nine the other, by crowding it into his coat tail pocket. When Christmas at their home in Norfolk. the very atmosphere, all about, is redolent of good wishes and happy surprises, and musical with words of of charity and good-will for all.

Yet to many people the coming of Christmas is anticipated with dread and looked back upon, when past, with a feeling of relief, because the holiday has come to mean 'give and take."

It is no exaggeration to say that thousands of good people in this land have forgotten how to give. Christmas presents represent to them a matter of exchange. The signs of the times show plainly that Grover Cleveland will be our next to palm off. Our stock is fresh and President, and the greatest evidence of staple as those from "The Grover." the fact is that Big Ike, the Clothing man, has equipped his force of seven clerks with Cleveland white beaver hats, which they will wear in all parts of the city during business hours, and any one striking or knocking off and damaging one of these hats in any way will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Two of Big Ike's clerks are small boys, and it would be well for all the parents of New Berne to notify their boys that there is trouble abead for them if they trouble one of these boys in any way. Parents, take warning and keep your boys out of trouble and raise them right.
