Delaware is said to have more living ex-Governors than any other State in the Union. Five of them—B. T. Biggs, John P. Cochran, James Ponder, John W. Hall and Charles F. Stokley—are still engaged in active business.

A number of manufacturers of Germany have determined to try a novel experiment. In order to procure cheap meat for their employes, they have established a number of breeding places for rabbits.

"There is no annexation sentiment in this country," protests the New York Tribune. "On the contrary, if the question came up in any practical form, there would be a powerful opposition to it."

There are, according to recent reports, 135 medical colleges in the United States whose diplomas are recognized by all health authorities, entitling their holders to the right to practice medicine.

"It is a significant fact," says the Congregationalist, "that fifteen ministers are employed on the daily press of New York City, writing on religious topics. It does not indicate missionary zeal on the part of the newspapers, but it shows that religion is a matter of growing popular interest, and that the constituency which is most valuable to the secular press demands to know what is going on in the world of religious thought and life."

SURROUNDED BY WOLVES.

A Hunter's Thrilling Adventure in Ohio.

Ninety-nine persons in one hundred would declare from their general knowledge of the State that there was not a wolf in Ohio to seriously threaten anybody.

Mr. Valois is one of the best known insurance men in Toledo, and is widely known as an enthusiastic and successful sportsman. Nobody in Northwestern Ohio is more familiar with the haunts of grouse, squirrels, and other small game than he, and few marksmen in this region excel him in skill.

The day Mr. Valois had chosen proved a cloudy one, with frequent flurries of snow, but it was an unusually good day for shooting, and before night Mr. Valois had the bottom of his wagon well filled with fine game.

As he proceeded he heard strange sounds in the woods about him, howlings and barking, but gave them little thought. He knew there were some wolves of the common gray species in the openings, and myriads of foxes, but had not the remotest fear of attack until, as he neared the edge of the woods, he was startled by pitiful cries from his dog under the wagon.

The dog's courage deserted him, and he started toward the open with part of the pack after him. Valois fired right and left rapidly, but the hungry creatures crowded closer around him.

The first impulse was to seek safety in a tree, but he soon discovered that though the pack made a fearful racket and would occasionally rush toward him, they lacked the ferocious courage of the great timber wolves.

Mr. Valois will not soon be caught again alone at night in the Oak Openings even if they are within about a dozen miles of the corporation line of a city of 80,000 people, the fourth in size in Ohio.—(New York Times.)

"Mussels are a variety of shell fish, the great value of which for food purposes is not at all recognized on this side of the Atlantic," said a naturalist to a Star reporter.

HE WAS A SLAVE.

The Career of a Brilliant Young Colored Orator.

John Jefferson Smallwood is perhaps the best known colored orator in New England to-day. His home is at Wilbraham, Mass.

Mr. Smallwood was born a slave, and when only 5 months old was torn from the arms of his mother, who was sent to El Paso, Texas. From that day he never saw her until about a year ago, when he discovered her whereabouts, after the manner resorted to by freed-men who since the war have sought to reunite their scattered families by continuous advertising.

He was born September 19, 1863, upon the plantation of Iton, Marcus W. Smallwood, of Northampton, S. C. His parents were sold when he was a babe, his father going to Louisville, Ky., and his mother to Texas. He was left in the care of the "mammys." At the age of 14 he found that his master claimed him until he was 21 years of age. He appealed to the courts for aid, but the master's claim was sustained. He made several attempts to escape and was successful when he was close onto his 21st year. He walked 125 miles, to Franklin, Va.

The following is part of his experience given in his own words: "When I was 13 years old I got hold of an old Webster's spelling book. With this book, and in secret I learned the alphabet and then to form letters into words."

"While at Franklin I began a temperance movement, which assumed large proportions. After a meeting one night a young man came and said to me: 'Why don't you go North and educate yourself?' I answered, saying that I had no money with which to go. He gave me the address of Rev. Ira G. Ross, of Greenfield, Mass., and told me to write to him for aid. As I had learned to write during my leisure hours while at work, I wrote to Mr. Ross. He in reply told me to come to New England, and after learning my financial condition sent me $25. With the same sum I reached Greenfield, Mass.

"In 1886 I entered Wilbraham Academy with $14 in my pocket. The same year I returned to Franklin and was put in nomination for Congress, but declined the honor, until I have become an educated man.

"I returned north and in 1889 I was chosen, with Rev. J. R. Cushing, a delegate to the World's Sunday School Convention at London, Eng. There I was invited by the Lord Bishop of London to speak in the crystal Palace with Sir John Lawson and Sir Charles Russell before the Royal family and Parliament. I also spoke at St. James Hall, on the American Negro.

"A little over a year ago I found my mother, who had with her two of my sisters at El Paso. Of the rest of our scattered family I have not yet learned the whereabouts. This is only an instance of the hundreds of colored families who through cruel slavery have become scattered. It is true that some have become reunited, but the majority never will meet their loved ones again."

From Him. "I say—aw-chappie, I don't see you out with your daw-daw any moah?" "I have given him away." "Ahe dawgs out of style?" "No; but don't you know the blawsted bwute kept winning away with me."—Washington Post.
