GEN. Dudley, of Indiana, predicts that Gorman and Blane will be the presidential candidates in 1892.

THE grand jury of New York city have indicted the editor of the Daily News of that city for publishing an account of the recent execution by electricity at Sing Sing.

THE Ohio Democrats accept McKinley and McKinleyism as the issue with something more than alacrity, and put the monopoly tariff, the Billion-Dollar Congress and the Force bill conspiracy in the front of the fight.—New York World.

It has been said that Senator Quay will send in his resignation as chairman of the Republican National Committee at the meeting of the committee to be held in Washington on the 29th, but it is not probable that it will be accepted. Mr. Quay fits the place exactly. He is capable of doing any thing to succeed.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—H. W. Ayer, secretary to President Polk, of the Farmers' Alliance, and manager in this city of the "Reform Press Bureau," which is also known as the "Alliance Press Bureau," said this afternoon that the work of sending out circulars designed to show the farmers of the country that it was to their advantage to hold back the wheat crop, was actively proceeding in this city, as well as in St. Paul, Minn., which was chosen as one of the seats of operations because of its location in the great wheat belt. Mr. Ayer said that there have already been 400,000 of these circulars sent out from Washington and that during the next few days an average of 100,000 per day will be mailed.

NORTH CAROLINA is peculiarly an agricultural State. It has iron and coal; it has cotton and tobacco; it has every cereal grown in Pennsylvania; it has fine pastures, grand water powers, valuable timber, genial climate, fruits in almost every variety, and easy access to markets; but it has, above all, hundreds of thousands of acres of worn or half-tilled lands which are much more valuable to the practical farmer today than the lands in the West costing quite as much, and where distance from markets and cyclones, droughts, grasshoppers, etc., rob the farmer of the fruits of his toil. The North Carolina Exposition will be a most valuable lesson to the North in the agricultural resources of that State especially, and of the old Southern States generally, and thousands of Northern people of all industrial classes should get down to Raleigh during the fall months.—Philadelphia Times.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Prof. Bell—Eureka.
Sr. Howard—Change of days
Howard—To err is human.

Fine watermelons are plentiful and cheap.

Fine grapes have made their appearance in market.

The excursion train to Morehead leaves this morning at 8:45 o'clock and starts back at 10 p.m.

A rather lengthy communication with other matters were crowded from this issue. They will appear Tuesday.

Mr. Numa Nunn, the JOURNAL's agent, left last night for Morehead and Beaufort on a collecting and canvassing trip.

The Ocracoke letter which we publish today was the second one of the series written by our correspondent but it was delayed in the mails.

The Sunday-school district convention and picnic, held at Kit Swamp yesterday, was well attended and highly enjoyed by those present, among whom were a number from New Berne.

The High Point Enterprise wants some one to beat the record of Mr. R. A. Hanner, who recently cut some wheat from his field, threshed it, ground it in his mill, made bread from the flour and ate it, all in 25 minutes.

Yesterday Mr. T. A. Green commenced a concrete pavement of the best material and in best workmanship in front of his two stores occupied by Messrs. F. Ulrich and S. H. Scott. Continue the work until the entire business part of the city is nicely fixed in this line.

"Haigho! Is there two Griftons?" This was the surprised ejaculation of a Grifton man who started on a pleasure trip with a return ticket, and who got off at a station on the way to partake of refreshments (?) and then instead of getting back on the train he had just left made a mistake and jumped aboard one going in the opposite direction. His first intimation of the blunder being when the conductor called out "Grifton" when the train arrived there, which caused the exclamation quoted.

The work of constructing the sewerage on Middle street and grading it having been completed, the work of improvement has gone as far as it can until the arrival of the shell-rock marl for macadamizing the streets. During the cessation of the work the hands that have been employed thereon, about twenty-five in number, will be used to put the streets throughout the city in good order. The matter of utilizing on some other street the one hundred and fifty feet of sewer pipe left over from the work on Middle street will be considered this week.

Spring Lambs.

An exchange states that the number of lambs shipped from Rockbridge county, Va., to the New York market this season will amount to 15,000 or 20,000 and that the industry has just sprung up within the last few years, there not being a car load shipped from that county five years ago.

The eastern section of North Carolina is finely adapted to this industry and yet it is neglected. Why is it thus? Furnishing spring lambs to the Northern markets pays handsomely. The more we diversify the better it will be for us. It would be a fine thing for Craven county farmers to send $50,000 or $75,000 worth of spring lambs along with their early peas.

THE INFLUENCE OF IDEALS.

ED. JOURNAL.—We determine our position among fellow-men by the measure of comparison and remembrance. The causes which excite a variety of feelings in the mind are often times observable. The power of association plays the greatest role in the tragedy of social life. We can discover our relations to others by studying the influences that move us to action.

These relations depend upon our opportunities. If a man does not make circumstances they will surely register his place in the scale of humanity. I am speaking of men living under the baleful banner that floats to Civilization's breeze. God knows how to take care of the heathen and infants.

It is about all man can do to manage his own affairs. Let not human intellect attempt to probe into the unfathomable depths of divine, inexorable decree. Herein lies, it seems to me, an analysis of the crime of Doubting. Humanity called to the bar of life must submit to the implacable verdict of an omnipotent tribunal. We are all under the sentence of divine disposition. Man may propose and achieve and prosper, but it belongs to God to dispose.

The sublimest privilege offered you and me is to hope. Hope is the "great or light" that brightens the individual planet of existence. It wings helpless souls and like the mother-bird teaches its young to fly from earthly fears within and without. Hope sets free the soul and ushers it into the world divine.

To despair is a crime for the gift of life is the opportunity to live when worlds and systems of philosophies drop into the abyss of extinction. It is a blessed thing to exist and leave behind exemplary foot-prints on the sands of mortality. In view of these things, were man born to live unto death without a hope there would be no need of our creating high ideals of existence. Christ in the all in all of the human race. There is none other in whom we have hope of life everlasting. When the testimony was publicly proclaimed that in the silence and darkness of night on the plains of Bethlehem an infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger was born the hope of glory in mankind the sublimest music ever heard broke forth to dispel the darkness of human despair through all ages and in every clime as Providence will.

As we survey the thousand mazes of human conduct and witness the uninterrupted departure of middle-aged souls, children, and silvered heads, we learn of innumerable broken hearts and of unattained souls hurrying scoffs of infidelity at the highest conceived ideal of the world. What does it all mean? It means that man is the executor of his own destiny, the builder of his own home, the promoter of his own happiness—that he has freedom of will.

I believe there is implanted in the breast of man the spirit of religion—a desire to rise above material things. This is proven by the yearnings of restless men for something to satisfy the longings of their natures.

Every human being has an ideal of some kind. It may be to worship stone, to cherish a sweetheart's sympathy, to make money, to regard the notion of an eternal choice when the night of death envelops sin-sick souls—or what not. We ought to nourish our spiritual natures upon the loftiest ideals of right and duty and truth! Ideals brighten or darken life. They are sunrise and sunset images; riddles or sunbeams; herbs of suspicion poisoning poverty-stricken hearts; their number is as the stars in the heavens. They die like unnoticed worlds. They are the tender aspirations of youth perishing at the fountain of dissipation; the misty charmers of old age to which they subjectively address their appeal in the garb of saintlike character, but within the chiefest of strategists, the meanest of hypocrites.

Experience has taught that the man who will help ruin character will laugh over the damnation of the degraded.

Ideals like scenery appeal to the sensibilities. The heart is often conqueror of the intellect. The desire to be agreeable, sociable (which destroys the positiveness of society) has stamped misery upon many a life. Let us, therefore, wear ourselves from those who defile play upon the heartstrings of friendship and do not hesitate to lead into pastures that paley brain and heart. Ideals wreck or ennoble character.

Oh! that man would create the highest possible consecrated common-sense manly ideals. J. S. T. July 23, 1891.

THE OCRACOKE EXCURSION.

The Arrival—Other Visitors—Descriptive and Historic Data.

Ocracoke Hotel, Ocracoke, N. C., July 16. ED. JOURNAL.—As I wrote you the excursion from New Berne reached here at 5:45 p. m., and by 6 o'clock we were safely housed at the hotel kept by Messrs. Spencer Bros., with the efficient aid of our former townsman, Mr. Fred Perry. We found a small colony of New Bernians here, Messrs. Mort. Marks, Jones Wabab and Milan Howard.

Everything is lovely here. The water and air are incomparable: equal to Bill Arp's with this single exception. We have no air here, it is all cool. This essential article, to the comfort of any one at the sea side, seems to be in great abundance here. I have never met a better supply anywhere. And then it is so pure and invigorating, the more you have, the more you want.

The whole place is a surprise to me. The town, if it was one, is ten times as large, I supposed. But it is no town, nor a village, I don't know what to call it; but think it must be a settlement. It has no act of incorporation from the Legislature, and hence is minus a municipal government.

There is right back of the hotel and in the heart of the settlement a lake fully a mile in circumference, completely land-locked except a ditch cut through the beach to connect it with the sound. I don't know what the citizens would do without it. It is a complete livery stable for the town people. Boating being the universal mode of conveyance; there would be great danger in hitching their steeds on the sound side, and great inconvenience on account of the ebb and flow of the tide, in effecting a landing. All of this is overcome by this natural harbor for the small craft so abundant here. There must be over a hundred boats that are securely moored in this beautiful provision of the Almighty.

There are numbers of dwellings all in sight. These were constructed, but with no indications of land marks to define ownership of the ground upon which they stand, but few fences, around them, and each house seems to be out of doors so to speak.

There are two churches, one is ornamented with a spire quite respectable in height. This was founded by the M. E. Church and the other, the M. E. Church South, this has no spire but a stained glass transept over the front entrance decorated with gilt letters WELCOME. Just to the right of the front door is the grave of some departed wife of a clergyman who probably ministered there in holy things.

Ocracoke inlet is about the oldest thing in North Carolina. It is true, they will show you the birth place of Virginia Dare up on Roanoke Island, the ballast unloaded by the colonist, from the ship that brought them, but then Virginia's mama passed through Ocracoke inlet before her little blue eyes ever beheld the light; and her ancestors probably strolled over these hills in quest of a place of settlement long before setting sail for that historic island.

This inlet was for years the outlet for the entire commerce of all the sounds and rivers from Elizabeth City to New Berne, and a large commerce it was. Portsmouth grew up under the influence of it and even isolated Beaufort Island was the site of a prosperous merchant.

Portsmouth was not only a port of entry but the receipt of customs demanded a custom house of a very high grade, and a marine hospital was established there.

About 1846 another inlet was broken through at Hatteras, and in a few years that became the favorite inlet with navigators. Portsmouth waned and settled to its present attitude of repose. Now again the turn seems to be towards Ocracoke inlet. Hatteras has lost its popularity with sea faring people from some cause and shipping again points to this inlet. The Government has also taken notice of it and a liberal appropriation has been made by Congress for the improvement of the channel way.

Messrs. Spencer Bros., keep the Nicholson House at Washington, a new and popular place. Fred Perry says send down the New Bernians he will look out for them. D. T. C.

To the Cyclists of New Berne.

Owing to the fact that a number of wheelmen have earnestly expressed themselves desirous of organizing a 'cycle club, thereby increasing the capacity for enjoying the healthy sport, and also encouraging others to purchase wheels, it is thought well to hold a meeting for the purpose of formally organizing and electing officers at the office of Mr. W. T. Hill, South Front street, at 8:30 o'clock, Wednesday evening, July 29th.

The owners of wheels and others interested are requested to be present.
