GOES BACK TO BERNE.

The Discussion Originated in the Old County-Supposes De Graffenreid Aimed to Evade the Issue.

ED. JOURNAL:-It is amusing to see the discussion about the way to spell the name of this city. Those discussing it differ among themselves as to how outlined as heartily as the Messenger the Swiss city's name is spelled; some does. If no better accommodations can have it Bern, others Berne. And right over there as to how to spell it. The original settlers contending for one Baron De Graffenreid chose to form s name indecisive on that question and yet give the name as he had it passed by the Legislature Newbern.

To asy that the Legislators did it in ignorance is unjust and to suppose that the Baron would have permitted such ignorance to have perpetuated itself in the name of his new home is absurd. No one who will carefully study the shrewdness of De Graffenreid will feel willing to assign him the position of a dunce. He had a motive in spelling it as one word. And I take it the mo-

What Fools We Mortals Be!

The above was once spoken by one of the greatest minds of the world, and has been handed down from age to age until the present day, and the only way we can condents after the works are constructed is for the city to become the owner at as serly a day as practicable and manage them to the best interest of all.

We heartily endorse the Messenger's statement and argument when it says that there are hundreds of families unable to provide the needed supply of pure water for themselves and that "landlords will not do it. What then?" Is is not the duty of the public-spirited tax payers to see that every home is supplied with pure drinking water of some kind? It is a public necessity, the health of the people demands it; the laws of sanitation require it; the exage prience of the world compels it; the benevolence and philanthropic spipit of the age says it must be done."
