GRADUALLY developments are being made in Southern industries, and one of the most important is the opening of the Bessemer Steel Works at Sparrow's Point, below Battimore. They are not all Alliance or People's party men, however, although the People's party has surprised the Democrats by electing no less than thirteen of its candidates. The political complexion of the house is: Democrats, 68; Republicans, 17; People's party, 13; Independent Democrat, 1, and one district doubtful. The farmers of all parties number fiftysix, besides several country merchants and teachers whose sympathies are in the same direction.

The farmers, most of whom are Alliance men, will have a majority in the aucus, not counting the Independent Democrat, whose admission to the caucus is doubtful, and thirty-nine of them are farmers. The farmers can, if they like, elect every officer of the house from the speaker down.

general interest in the proceedings.

The declaration of the commanderin-chief in favor of the establishment of departments of the G. A. R. for negro veterans created a decided sensa-tion. It was hardly expected that he would so openly favor the separation of the races, and the whites of Louisiana and Mississippi were overjoyed at his decisive recommendations.
