It is very hard to decide what constitutes legality; a jury of one-third aegroes and two-thirds white men frequenly decide in our court house what is legal and what is not and often to the greet and what is not, and often to the great discomfiture of our lawyers. The better plan is to let the whole matter of cide the question. Judging from the present outlook, ten years hence a man who has the temerity to defy public opinion and spell it with a small b will be laughed at as an old "'fo' de wah" fossil or crank.
