I never enjoyed a late break fast so much, and I remarked that the cook must have an unusual modicum of patience to keep breakfast on for two hours and a half.

"You are a little off, Mr. Slooum," "he replied. "I cooked your breakfast, myself. In this country servants never live in the house. They always go home as soon as anything is required to be done."

Suffice it to say, that by the time the dishes were cleared my workin. day was half gone; but the fire burned all right, and before dark I was fortunate enough to score a new point on my per simmon patent. So, I went out to the fancy store and bought three mottoes to hang up in my room, namely, to wit:

"A singed cat dreads the fire;" 3 "God bless the cook," and 3 "All's well that ends well "
