WE heard the other day that a certain school teacher kissed the girls as a mode of punishment, and that before the school had been running two months forty old maids entered their names as pupils and behaved worse than all the others combined, in order to be properly and satisfactorily punished.

THE State managers of the World's Fair have been in consultation to devise some measure to cover the expense of the North Carolina exhibit. We would suggest to them to submit the act of the last assembly to some astute lawyer to see if it does not make an appropriation without regard to the Direct tax fund.

THESE items are from the society columns of the New Orleans Picayune. Miss Winnie Davis returned from the North several weeks ago, and is now spending a short while at her beautiful home, Beauvoir. Miss Davis and her mother, it is expected will spend the winter--or a part of the season at least--in New Orleans a delightful bit of news to their large circle of friends.

THE news from Louisiana is that the contest between the lottery and anti-lottery men is very close, neck and neck so to speak. The lottery men carried New Orleans by a big majority but the Delta, a strong anti-lottery paper, says that the delegates so far elected stand: For lottery 234 and against it 233. The State Convention will be composed of 636 delegates and both sides claim that they will win.

A BUNN dispatch of Dec. 1, says an engineer employed on the railway line running between Aargau, a canton of Switzerland, and Waldkirch, a town of Baden, on the Rhine, was dismissed for some infraction of the rules of the road. The engineer, out of avenge, opposed the dismissal of an engine, jumped from the cab, and let the locomotive dash down the track at full speed just as a train loaded with passengers came rushing from the opposite direction on the same track. The engineer and fireman of the passenger train were caught in the wreck of the engine and were instantly killed. Three of the passengers were fatally injured, and nearly all of the others suffered from wounds of a more or less serious nature.

FROM the Baltimore Journal of Commerce we take the following figures in regard to the quantity and movement of some of our cereals: Beerbohm's corrected estimate makes the world's wheat crop of 1891 exceed last year's production by 16,000,000 bushels. The world's production in 1890, as reported by the United States Agricultural Department, was 2,203,889,552 bushels. Beerbohm says the rye product of 1891 is 224,000,000 bushels less than 1890. Germany imported during September 4,864,000 bushels of wheat and 2,728,000 bushels of rye. Of the imports of wheat Russia contributed 2,240,000 bushels--nearly fifty per cent of the entire amount, while the United States is second with 1,256,000 bushels. Russia also furnished 2,064,000 bushels of rye, the United States 121,600 bushels.

WINTER SPORTS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

What One of Our Northern Visitors Has to Say of New Berne and Vicinity as a Game Country and Otherwise.

A week ago I came in from a tour of the islanded sounds which lie between Norfolk and Newbern, and I candidly admit that I never enjoyed a short salt water cruise more heartily. This is saying a good deal for an old bachelorette like myself, who has coasted almost the entire Atlantic and Pacific coasts from Labrador to Alaska, "as I sailed," but in fact the whole voyage is so novel, and so cheap and comfortable withal, that I am constrained to press the like enjoyment upon any one who requires a week's or three months' relaxation and change of climate at this season of the year, or at any other season for that matter. One can run out of the latitude of snowfalls and sleet in twenty-four hours, and tie up in Newbern with bright-leaved personal plants, good friends, and no end of oysters all around him. He can curl himself up in the sunshine like an old house dog on a south veranda, with rosebush and wisteria climbing over it, and enjoy contentment until his heart is full. If he be from the East he will find lots of folks here whom he has long missed from home and wondered where they have been these many years. Here he can contemplate the "New South" in its changing aspects, with the African penguin gradually passing off and giving place to the bright effulgence of a better day, and a community of elements, once discordant, but now so intimately blended that politics cannot split them. And when he has chewed his clover cud of fancy for two days and a half, until the return steamer sails back to Norfolk, and been the recipient of unworldly hospitality from the oyster canneries, the pulp and lumber mills, the ginny, and miscellaneous factories, and inspected the fair grounds, the coquina sea wall, and the cemetery inclosed by the same quaint shell rock dug from the river bed, he will go away with new impressions and advanced ideas of this peninsular section and its capabilities. For my own part, I am here to stay until the end of spring. This is a restful place. Before me is a lawn beplangled with roses and cape jasmines, and shaded by the glossy-leaved magnolia and the dark-barked cedar. The sweet gum, the catalpa, the cherry berry and the mimosa are just passing out of leaf and baring their limbs for the winter tussle; but there is left a great profusion of clambering vines and bright-leaved plants, ever green to grace the halcyon season. From a room I have an unobstructed view of the noble Neuse River, here a full mile wide, with wooded bluffs of autumn foliage along the opposite shore. Near by a yacht club has its cosy quarters, where jaunty crafts ride at anchor, or spread their white wings boomed and speed away. A gleaming revenue cutter lies in midstream, one of the milk white squadron. In the distance a vista opens down river toward Pamlico Sound, twelve miles off, in the blue. The outlook is very charming. Our steamer came up this river at sun-up one still, bright morning, when the reflections of the wooded bluffs, the sky and the surface of the water; and during all this week the silvery moon has been casting its silvery sheen upon the ripples at night, and at the full bringing it with a lambent zone which stretches from shore to shore. One evening I fancied that I saw a young water sprite or naiad diving off from the edge of it, but it was only the splash of a sturgeon in the moonbeams. These sounds of eastern North Carolina are a great deal larger than they look on the map, Pamlico Sound is forty miles wide at its broadest. Vessels in mid channels are always out of sight of land, or could be, were the bottom not so near the surface. Land is often visible alongside over the rail. On the shoalest spots small cabins are built on iron piles to serve as beacons for mariners by day and night. Being far from land and apart from intercourse with men, the isolated keepers are apt to discover in due course of time that solitude and inaction are not rest and peace. Such man have abundant opportunity to imagine what existence might be if it only were. Gulls would become lonesome in such places. Of course agriculture does not enter into their industrial economy. The "bankers" and "bankers" that they raise [from below] all that they eat. Quiddities like this, however, are tolerated only on the forecastle deck on a cold day. Besides Pamlico Sound, there are the Albemarle, Currituck, Roanoke and Croatan sounds, all of which the regular packets traverse on their water routes. These constitute a pleasant alternation from the navigation of the canals through which they have to pass on the way from Norfolk or Elizabeth City. The whole hydrographic system is much like a chain of lakes with slack water connections. Altogether the voyage is a novel experience, and well worth a description in my letter. I think it is very easy and comfortable to get one's luggage snugly stowed aboard one of the elegant steamers of the Old Dominion Steamship Line, at New York, and to have no more care of it until it is put ashore on the company's dock at Newbern. You simply change at Norfolk from a sea going vessel to a smaller light draft craft, that will carry no more than 7/8, through the canal. There is satisfaction in traveling in this way. You are at home all the time; you are the guest of the steamer. You lounge, play cribbage, eat and smoke; you are not hustled, your feet are sweet and unbroken, if the weather be fair, and I have never happened to strike bad weather yet. You need not, in these days, if you take pains to consult the weather forecast of the U. S. office. This is a marvelous age!

The supplementary steamers of the Old Dominion Line leave Norfolk for Newbern every Monday and Thursday. The duration of the round trip is three days, and the cost $3 per day and all found. If you wish to be ship, I'd advise you to come along. I have advised late passages with Capt. Southgate on the Newbern. This boat can accommodate two dozen comfortably.

NORTH CAROLINA AND THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Subscription Proposed--The Durham Globe's Liberal Action--The Legislature Ought Yet to Make an Appropriation.

Every one recognizes the importance of North Carolina's having an exhibit at the World's Fair commensurate with the vastness and variety of her resources, and general regret is expressed at the failure of the Legislature to make a suitable appropriation for the purpose. The Durham Globe, with its characteristic vim and persistence, keeps agitating the question, and now comes out, not simply with words of argument, but with the distinct and business-like proposal that as large a sum as possible--$25,000 is the amount it plans for--shall be raised by contributions from citizens of the State, and announces its subscription of $350 for the purpose, and proposes that all interested citizens of the State follow suit. The Globe says its own subscription will be used in getting up an exhibit at the Fair to be labelled "North Carolina," whether any other firm or individual donates a penny or not. Geo. D. Hartt, cashier of the First National Bank of Durham, is the one it proposes to receive the contributions. The proposition shows the earnest interest the Globe takes in the matter. As for ourselves we strongly desire that our glorious State should be properly represented, and we have not yet despaired of obtaining an appropriation for the purpose. The best and surest way would be by an extra session of the Legislature, but if nothing can be done let the necessary appropriation be made at the next session of the Legislature, which begins in January, 1892, and the space be spoken for in advance and reserved for the North Carolina exhibit. One argument that will probably be urged against proceeding thus is that the time--only a few months--will be too short. It will be short, but with the people aroused it need not take long to procure the exhibit. All over the State successful county fairs have been held for years, and the people through them are educated in a measure as to the best methods to pursue in getting up exhibits, and this will serve them in good stead in the emergency.
