South and its Probabilities.
It seems to me that there are some truths to be dwelt upon and some facts to reach the people, that may convey a lesson of good. While the compliment of opening your superb Fair is deeply appreciated by me, yet I will confess that this visit is inspired chiefly by the hope, that something may be said to my fellow farmers and fellow workers, to lispel in a measure the gloom that has fallen upon them upon the substantiat blessing that Almighty Providence has given this people.

No reasonable man could doubt the natural course of the world's markets as against a heavy production of cotton for the past year. With the enormous losses of the Eaglish in South Amerian securieties, the great blow to France of the engulfing of hundreds of mil-lions in the final break up of the Panama Canal, the calamitous season and diminution of the food crops of the Eastern world, by attest four hundred millions of bushels, the depreciation of silver in China, and the extraordinary supplies of cotton, most of which were of somewhat inferior grade—each and or even average crop was produced is
