On one occasion, when speaking in behalf of Southern rights, be was asked how he, a Union soldier, could use such language, and he replied, "every wound in my body pleads for the brave men of the South." Therefore we love and honor William R. Morrison, but we do not regard and a strong presidential candidate.
He does not belong to the highest class of statesmen. His tariff bill, known us the "horizontal tariff bill, apbill," did not receive the fall approval of his party, and would array against him strong opposition. Campbell, Vilas, Palmer and Boies, are all good men, but do not compare with Cleveland in statesmanship or popularity. The National Convention of the People's party will be held at Omaha on the 4th of July.

L. L. Polk, of North Carolina, is the man usually mentioned as its probable candidate. This party will cut a small picture in the national campaign. Its chief signigcance arrises from the embarrassment it will cause the Democracy in North Carolina. Polk's personal popularity will draw some votes from the Democratic party in this State, but in the great National Canvass it well be but a fly on the horn of the ox.

The great contest will be between the Republican and Demcratic parties, and no Southern man should besitate to stand under the Democratic flag in the defense of his home and fireside.
