THERE are good many bayonets out this year, as any one can see, but there will be a good many more if Messrs. Harrison, Carnegie, Platt and Wannamaker are to be our leaders and guides.—St. Louis Republic.

WORKINGMEN have waited nearly four years for Mr. Harrison to get their pay raised, and they are now confronted, not only with the theory of high tariff, but the condition of reduced wages.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MARION BUTLER congratulated the people of his district on the re-nomination of Hon. B. F. Grady for Congress, and predicted his re-election by a good majority. It will be amusing after this to hear him tooting his horn for Br. Koonce, whom he tried to down but couldn't.—Wilmington Star.

THE Third party has dwindled to nothing in Northampton county. Three weeks ago there was a large number of them, but now they have disappeared. In one township there are said to be only three in another, one of the largest, there are none. In one or two townships the movement will have a small following.

It is stated that a portion of the Republican corruption fund shall be used to assist the Third party in the South. Plenty of evidence to sustain this assertion can soon be obtained if the Democratic managers will but watch the Third party leaders. The Raleigh News is in Alabama have received their first installment from Republican headquarters and remittances will shortly go to Virginia and North Carolina.

THERE is a good deal of speculation as to why the presidential letters of acceptance are so much delayed. Mr. Harrison is probably cudgeling his brain to find out how to advocate the Force bill while seeming not to do so. He knows that he cannot say he is opposed to the infamous measure, and yet he wants to place himself in the position of not appearing to be very zealous for it. He is, in a word, anxious to fix his letter so as to make the North think he wants it and the South that he does not want it. Mr. Harrison will have to keep awake many nights before he solves this very troublesome problem, especially as he is handicapped by his previous unsavory Force bill record.—Richmond Times.

LOCAL NEWS.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Howard. Big Ike—Grand opening. Miss Hollister—School opening. Mrs. Nettie W.—Sailing days. Miss Nettie Walker—Music class.

The steamers of the N. N. & W. Direct Line now leave New Berne on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. They arrive Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

A Sunday-school will be organized at Mount Calvary Temple this morning at 9 o'clock and public service will be held at 5 1/4 p. m. A distinguished speaker will be present of noted deep piety to give interest to the meeting.

A letter received by Professor Adams, President of the Y. M. C. A., from Mr. Thos. G. Wilkinson, of Clawson, S. C., the new Y. M. C. A. Secretary, announces that he will arrive by rail to enter upon the work Thursday evening, September 1st.

At a meeting of the Naval Reserve, Friday night, a constitution and by-laws was adopted for the organization. They were quite rigid, but just such as all organizations should have. The next step will be the procuring of uniforms and other equipments, which our citizens will no doubt assist in.

The Collegiate Institute will open one week from to-morrow. It is desirable for all pupils to be on hand at the beginning that classification may be conducted rapidly and the regular work be commenced subject to as few interruptions as possible.

The Third party in North Carolina is following in the footsteps of the Republican party when it was in power. The Leaksville Gazette says that at Wentworth, a few days ago, it nominated for Register of Deeds a man who can neither read nor write.

A colored fisherman who has been at New Berne for some time, passing by the name of Steve Kerney, was arrested yesterday on information from another colored man, who says he knows that he committed a murder in Georgia. He is in jail. An investigation will be held Monday at 11 a. m. before W. H. Oliver, J. P.

The Headlight editor paid a visit to the Goldsboro Furniture factory and found it "crowded" with orders from every portion of the Union and an extra force of operatives employed to keep up with the steady increasing trade. We are glad to hear of the success attending the enterprise and we wish that New Berne had a similar one.

Messrs. S. H. Scott and W. P. Burrus & Co., have just made considerable improvement on the lower portion of Bell's Alley which runs back of their stores, especially that part of it which projects into the river on "made ground." They have covered it with about a foot and a half of saw dust which will do away with the mud and water which was so annoying after rains. It makes it now a good easy place to drive over.

Coming and Going.

The family of Mr. J. C. Whitty, who have been spending the summer at their summer home in Morehead, returned home yesterday morning.

Miss Helen Bryan, who has been visiting her uncle, Judge H. R. Bryan, left yesterday to visit relatives at Kingston.

Messrs. J. H. Hackburn and F. Ulrich, who attended the Grand Conclave of Knights Templar in Denver, Col., and since then have been spending some time in pleasure in that State, arrived home last night.

Mrs. W. P. Burrus and children, who have been visiting relatives, returned home last night.

Mrs. Graham Richardson, who has been spending a few weeks at Seven Springs, came in last night on route to her home.

Miss Faith Brock returned from a visit to relatives at Kingston.

Her M. C. Moore, who has been spending his vacation at his old home near Blowing Rock, passed through last night on route to his home in Morehead.

A Bear Story. Wednesday night Mr. B. B. Mallison, who had been up to New Berne, got off the train at Crotan, 10 miles from the city and started to walk down the railroad track from the station to his home, it being about 8 o'clock.

After proceeding a half a mile he noticed an animal at the side of the track, which in the darkness of the night he at first thought was a cow but as he passed it jumped on the track and came on in the same direction he was going. He then noticed another smaller animal ahead and made the startling discovery that he was right between a bear and her cub with only an umbrella in his hand. However Bruin went by him without offering molestation. Both the bears then being ahead of him, Mr. Mallison took the back track, borrowed a breech-loading gun, returned and found the bears still on the railroad three or four hundred yards farther on than when he first encountered them. He fired both barrels of his gun at them. One bear got immediately off the track, the other passed on a little further and got off.

Mr. Mallison, re-loaded and proceeded on his way. He had not gone far before he saw something else on the track. Thinking of bears, he blazed away again, but failed at the time to find what resulted from the shooting.

The next day he started to visit the place for the purpose of making investigations, and met Mr. Calvin Smith, section master, who with his force of hands had been clearing the growth from the sides of the road. "Well, Mr. Mallison, some one has shot a hog here" was the greeting he received. Looking where Mr. Smith pointed, Mr. Mallison saw a black porker which his well aimed lead had laid low.

On starting to leave Mr. Mallison heard Mr. Smith shout at him and looking back he saw a bear coming up on the track between them, but after taking a look at them the bear turned and went back in the woods in the same direction he came.

Friday Mr. Mallison's father, Mr. W. H. Mallison, in passing the place discovered also the body of the bear that Mr. Mallison had shot, stiff in death. Out of his three shots two at least proved effective—good marksmanship for the night time. It was a brave act to attack the bears alone as he was. Most men in his fix, if they had not secured company would have gone home by another route and left the "game" to the freedom of the woods.

Eight Delivery Wagons. Another delivery wagon, Mr. J. J. Tolson's was delivered from Messrs. G. H. Waters & Son's carriage factory yesterday. This is the seventh they have recently made to order for New Berne merchants, and they are at work now building another for "The Oaks Dairy" a match for the other line one they built for the dairy which has been in use a little over a week. These wagons are giving great satisfaction. They are unsurpassed for combined lightness and strength.

We noticed also in the factory an elegant double seated carry just completed for Mr. Wm. Jenkins of Pantege, which would do credit to any factory.

Work is also going on at the factory on serviceable vehicles of less pretentious character. We notice among the work in progress a very strong dray something larger than the average that is being built for Mr. J. W. Meade.

Our people are fortunate in having such a good chance to get any kind of vehicle they want, built at short notice of the best material and in such excellent style and finish as shown in the goods that the factory turns out.

The Headlight says the date for the speaking of Gen. Adlai E. Stevenson in Goldsboro has been changed to Saturday, September 19th. All the railroads entering there will give special rates to the occasion.

[From "The Baltimorean"] IN MEMORIAM.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—The following exquisitely beautiful lines were written by Mrs. Elizabeth Oaksmith who is passing the evening of her days with her daughter at Hollywood, this State. There is a solemn and mystical beauty in them, seldom equalled.

Mrs. Oaksmith is the last survivor of that grand Galaxy of Poets, Edgar A. Poe, Fitz Green Halleck, Joseph Rodman Drake, Mrs. Hermanns and William Vullen Bryant, who were the first to force recognition among the poets and writers of England and who were second to none in grandeur and loftiness of expression, power, pathos and beauty. Wherever the English language is spoken, Mrs. Oaksmith is recognized as a great poetess, and has her niche in the Poets' Pantheon.

J. H.

BY MRS. ELIZABETH OAKSMITH.

"Sua sponte morietur."

Meseems in all the secret caves,
Where the cool water softly lavas,
The purple shell beneath the waves,
Goes forth a sound of tender moan,
And all the islands far and lone
Take up the melancholy tour,

As crying each unto its sister wave;
"The beautiful ye did not save,
But hurried downward to the grave."
Oh! rushing wild, untutored breeze,
Oh! ye remorseless, heaving seas,
Could ye not pity such as these?

Than theirs no sweeter cadence ever stirred,
Or bill, or vale, or coral heard,
Of hushed note from singing bird,
Oh! blossoms of sweet smell and hue,
Living aromas from the morning dew,
These lovely ones were all akin to you.

Oh! supple willow, graceful vines,
Love-languishing voices of stately pines,
Weep ye in nature's solitary shrine!
Weep! there is none to read your ancient lore!
These sensitive Druids, hand in hand, no more
Shall your dim covets lovingly explore.

Oh! fountains, murmuring as ye flow,
Well fitting is your sound of woe,
Breathing your reedy arcades through,
Is one sad note, unknown till now,
In tragic eddies, telling how
These golden heads were merged below.

In silent caves no more to be
A gleam in a hope to me,
An echo in life's mystery.
A tender link is broke in twain—
Forever hushed a sweet refrain,
And in its stead a note of pain.

Such as from ancient fame might rise,
When ceased its wonted sacrifice,
And altar stone deserted lies.
Oh! mystic eyes, that never knew
Love-fitting is your sound of woe,
Oh! lips, that only breathed the truth,
Oh! virgin hearts! The Hebrew maid,
Who sought the mountain's lonely shade,
That stars alone should hear her soft upbraid.

Of her sad fate, from harp and timbrel
The untouching heart of love bereft—
Her sighs deep smothered in the rocky cliff.

And she, the Greek, on Aulis' sea-girt
rock,
Bidding the anguish, and the mighty
shock
Of ocean beat, with sacrificial look,
And she who spurred the tyrant's dark deed,
And to the higher mandate bent the knee,
Oh! holiest virgin! pure Antigone!
Come forth, oh! maidens, chaste and bright
Robbed and bereft by earthly might,
And greet your sisters in the land of light.

Oh! forth for such as these should go,
A wail, as for a common woe,
That all our hearts should feel and know,
Oh! where the onward thought the lofty aim,
For something nobler than a name,
However sung in earth's acclaim.

The rich, full life, so crowded and miserable,
So high, that to be mortal pained
Had better attribute out-raged!
Ah! what bright planet ever near!
Revolving in its own celestial sphere,
Beheld akin these sisters here!

And their fair dwellers, leaning o'er
Their flowery dais upon our shore
Beholding these, mindless of our deplore,
With dulcet whispers soothed the sense
of pain,
And bore them to some heavenly plain,
Where congregated the rapt angelic train!

Ye myriad stars, that fill the voids of space,
Tell where amid you is the dwelling place
Of such as these? Oh! shall we know the face,
Of our dear ones, Oh! shall we go
Onward to where the fountains flow
From steep to steep, and shall we know
Whither, in all the fields afar,
To sin our flight to that bright star,
That welcomed them from their radiant car?

Where is the one divergent fibre knit
In all my frame, that bids them sit
Aloof from me, in place sunlit,
And love endowed? The onward speed
By Christ for truth to knowledge wed,
By all benignant aspirations led,
Beyond the contest, and the spleen,
That come our holiest, and our best between,
While pressing onward to the great Unseen!

Ah! in some blessed mansion by the hand
Of the dear Father fashioned in a land
More bright than this I see a band,
Where heavenly features and I know,
Smile brighter than when I last saw,
They made for me a banquet couchless dew.

What are the days, and what the years,
All counted by our flowing tears,
To such as reach the heavenly spheres?

I call ye with a fond, deluding cry,
And half ye gleam upon the mortal eye,
Responsive to a love that cannot die.

I seek ye, seek ye far and wide,
Not in some lone, out-standing star-dust
void,
Not in some shattered disk of Asteroid,
Can your glad spirits hopeless light,
Companion'd with chaos and dark night,
Where undeveloped shapes the soul
affright?

For your fair form essence knew, the thrill
Of raptur'd vision onward, onward still,
Beyond where shining stars their orbits run!

Oh! ye young prophets, visioned thick,
Oh! ye young poets, hearts heroic,
Ye duty anchored like the stoic!

What unto ye was half with diamond
gleam,
Compared to bravely of woe and stream,
And your sweet vigils and poetic dream?

Dear lives, complete, however brief,
Fresh as aromas of the rose bright leaf,
With no cold harvest of the autumn
sheaf.

All Paradise in look and mind,
How could our earth your captive bind?
Ye must a fairer country find.

Where royal palms, and golden shore,
With rich repente should restore
A youth more lovely than before.

I will not vex the realms of space,
In longings vain for each dear face,
To beam from out its heavenly place.

Nor call, and call, as if to chide;
Doth not the Father lovingly bide?
Shall not the Great Eternal bide?

In his own law! Shall his decree
Of order and true majesty
Be set aside for such as we?

One world He gives with catalyst and
rock,
One world with passion-blast, and tempest
shock;
One world, whose lonely hands interlock,
And stretch their hands across the main,
And ask companionship in vain,
While all their mountain pines complain!

One world for human love, and human woe,
Searching the vast Unseen to know,
Calling, and calling, as the mighty flow
Of generations pass in silence-dread,
Mingling with myriads of the ancient dead;

The portal passing with a muffled tread,
And then the elon gates slide noiseless back,
And from our eyes conceal their onward
track;
As stars are hid by intervening rock.

Nor backward answer they our call,
Nor lift a corner of the pall,
To say that "dying is not all,"
Yet not the less our human trust,
In something that forever must
Survive the dying of our dust.
