Still another victory for the Chapel Hill team. They defeated the University of Virginia, twenty-six to nothing. Hurrah for the Carolina boys.
It has now been decided that the $25,000 appropriated from the direct tax fund is available towards making a North Carolina exhibit at the Worlds Fair.
Next Monday is the time that our people will have the pleasure of hearing Rev. Sam. Small, of Atlanta, the great Southern evangelist and popular temperance orator. His subject will be "The Man of Galatara."
Mr. H. A. Latham, of the Washington Gazette, again announces himself a candidate for reading clerk in the House. Mr. Latham was unanimously elected to that position last session, and we believe entire satisfaction. He is thoroughly qualified.
An advertisement in the JOURNAL is a good drummer for any New Berne business man. It goes direct to 2000 first sides, besides the others are reached somewhat indirectly. Professional men find just as much benefit in keeping their cards constantly before our readers.
Mr. J. A. Jones has made a splendid acquisition in securing the services of Mr. X. M. Brock to manage his livery stable business. Mr. Brock is experienced in the business, and his uniform courtesy and reliability makes it a pleasure to have dealings with him.
The revenue cutter Winona, which was called away last summer to do quarantine duty at Delaware breakwater, has returned to our waters, having been relieved by the steam tug Foster, which belongs to the marine hospital service. The crew of the Winona is the same with the exception that Lieut. Davis is away on a leave of absence and his place is temporarily filled by Lieut. A. R. Hasson. This is Lieut. Hasson's first visit to our city. He is so well pleased with it that he expresses an inclination to remain.
V. M. C. A. Business Meeting.
A Business meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held at the hall Wednesday night at 8 o'clock for the final report of the committee on constitution, which was appointed some time ago.
The matter of the selection of directors is to be settled at this meeting.
Sudden Death of Mr. Basil Manly
Again New Berne is called upon to mourn the loss of one of her most useful citizens, Mr. Basil Manly. He died very suddenly shortly before six o'clock yesterday afternoon, of heart failure. Mr. Manly's health had been broken for some months, and he was thinking of going North to consult the most skilled physicians. It had been about a week since Mr. Manly had been out, but there was nothing to indicate such an abrupt ending of his life, consequently his death was quite a shock to our citizens.
Mr. Manly served last year as city councilman from his ward, and was re-elected this year.
For about fifteen years he has held the position of master machinist of the A. & N. C. R.; was also senior member in the New Berne Iron Works, and an active member of the Atlantic fire company. He was 43 years of age.
He was an agreeable companion and a courteous gentleman.
The notice of the funeral will be given later.
Coming and Going.

TO DREDGE OR NOT?

Canners Say There Must be Dredging or Their Business is Ruined.
A Review of the Claims and Counter Claims Made by Advocates of Each Side.
It is evident that at the approaching session of the Legislature the oyster question will again come before that body for action. Unrestricted dredging is not sought but the feature of the present law entirely prohibiting that method of taking is a source of dissatisfaction to the canners especially are strongly opposed to its remaining in force.
Dredging has its opponents, but it is manifest that other methods of taking the oysters, being slower, the expense attending them is greater, the canners assert moreover, and point to the experience of the time since the law was enacted as confirmation, that unless dredging is permitted, not enough oysters can be caught to supply the needs of the factories already established in this State, which are eleven in number.
Another reason brought forward for permitting dredging under proper restrictions is that the oysters in deep water can not be taken in any other way, tongs being restricted by the nature of their implements to shallow water.
Those in favor of dredging ask that the law be so amended as to allow it to be carried on in water of such depth that it will not interfere with any rocks which the tongs can work. This request looks reasonable but the other side replies that if dredging is allowed at all, no attention will be paid to the restriction except when some one is at hand to see that the law is not violated and that in the great expanse of waters in the sounds such wholesale espionage would be impracticable and would virtually open the door for dredging anywhere and everywhere. The canners and dredgers say, on the contrary, that each difficulty that presents itself can be provided against by statutes that will give all an opportunity to work without trouble. The general outline of the plan which they think would result thus is about as follows:
First: Specify the shallowest water in which it is permissible to dredge.
Second: Put in a provision that will allow only small and medium size dredges to be used. The objection that is made that the dredge breaks the shells and kills many oysters that it does not secure will thus be to a large extent obviated.
Third: Continue the present culling law so that by the throwing back of the small oysters a supply will always be coming on for future seasons.
Fourth: Make the penalty for a violation so large that its infliction will be dreaded. Let it be not less than $50 for each offence and make the offending boat liable for the money, no matter who is or who is not in charge at the time. This will guarantee the payment of the fine with but little delay or trouble.
Fifth: Let a proportion of the fine—say one-half, go to the informer. This added to the business interest the tongs have in the protection of the beds on which they can work, will make sharp watchmen of them and cause the dredgers to feel that it would be a risky venture for them to transgress the law in any particular.
And lastly, they propose that the dredgers submit to a liberal tonnage tax—say possibly $2.50 per ton per annum on each boat engaged, which it is said will bring the state a goodly revenue from her oyster beds.
These propositions we believe correctly represent the views of those engaged in canning as to the legislation needed to cause their business to flourish in this State.
If the enactment of these provisions will accomplish the results stated without injuring the oyster industry in any other way they ought to become laws. If any feature proposed would work harm to any other interest involved let it be pointed out and the objection shown.
Superior Court.
Court convened promptly at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The morning session was consumed with making up the juries and with the delivery of the Judges charge to the grand jury, which was a full one. The grand jury is as follows:
W. B. Boyd, foreman; T. H. Mallison, Wm. Colligan, W. C. White, W. A. Ewell, J. W. Messic, N. P. Willis, Sylvester McCoy, T. E. French, F. P. Outlaw, J. F. Robinson, J. R. Hill, J. T. Hall, T. H. Avery, Moses D. Phelps, col., Isaac Powell, col., James M. Rhem, S. H. Wilson.
In the afternoon the case of State vs. Chas. Sutton for assault and battery was tried—the defendant being an officer of the law in the discharge of his duty at the time. It did not take the jury long to say not guilty.
A few cases of costs were called and disposed of. After this court adjourned to 9.30 this morning.

Called to a Deanship.

Mr. John Stanly Thomas, who has been attending Princeton Theological Seminary arrived on the steamer Neuse Sunday to make a visit to his relatives prior to entering upon a special field of work the responsibility of which he has accepted, the Deanship in the celebrated New York Trade Schools, which were founded 11 years ago by Col. Richard T. Auchmuty a philanthropic millionaire.
As one of our New Berne young men is to fill an important place in the schools we will refer briefly to them and their work:
The "Auchmuty system" of manual, scientific, systematic trade instruction in all leading trades originated by the founder of these schools is different from anything heretofore attempted and has produced such remarkable results as to attract much attention both in this country and in Europe.
Some 600 bright active students are in attendance during the session work and reside mostly in the handsome dormitories of brick and stone.
These young men leave home and friends and cast their characters in the great metropolis amid its myriad glittering fascinations and inducements to worldliness.
Some of these men, though of fine minds, are without creed or religion and maybe others careless and indifferent about the soul's welfare and the abiding power and value of character.
Through personal evangelistic labors the interested friends of the young men and the institution hope to reach and persuade to Gospel living.
Mr. Thomas in accepting the Deanship is placed at the head of this branch of the school work, conducting the religious meetings held and working personally among the students, an important position for one of his years but he is so heartily in accord with such efforts that his selection for the place will no doubt prove an excellent one.
Mr. Thomas has not yet finished his theological studies, but his holding this position will not interfere with them. During the time in which he will not be actually engaged in his duties he intends to continue his studies in the same city at Union Theological Seminary.
We are in receipt of letter from a class mate of Mr. Thomas at Princeton Seminary from which we make the following extracts:
No doubt the home friends of Mr. John Stanly Thomas will have a pleasure in hearing of the distinction placed upon him in a call to the head of the personal evangelistic work of the New York Trade Schools, and rejoice with his friends here in this recognition of his high character and ability.
These Trade schools were established for the purpose of giving men instruction in certain trades, and men better than that which could be had in a workshop. The attendance represents all parts of this country, as well as other nationalities.
It is the purpose of Col. Auchmuty and the other Christian gentlemen associated with him, to throw around these young men the influences of the Gospel. It is to the province of this work that these gentlemen have called Mr. Thomas. And it is indeed a grand privilege, the infinite possibilities which lie unrevealed in the souls of these young men who are to become the peopery of the country, make this a field of untold usefulness. Whatever successes are attained through instrumentality will be watched by the management of other schools similar in character and the methods and means adopted effectively to accomplish good will be quite likely introduced into them.
The responsibilities which thus lie on New Berne's young son of two and twenty years are manifold; that he has been selected in but another evidence of his sterling worth and the high esteem which he everywhere commands.
Mr. Thomas will assume his new duties the latter part of December.
Prophecies That Failed.
The 27th inst. has passed and the prophecies of astronomers in reference to a collision between the earth and the comet likewise of a star shower on that night have come to naught. In a good portion of the country clouds obscured the sky so that the celestial fire works, if they were occurring could not be seen. Other places were favored with fair weather. Wherever this was the case, crowds of people gazed upward in anxious expectation, but they looked in vain, to the delight of the timid and superstitious, to the great disappointment of some others.
In Philadelphia, according to the Washington Post, numbers maintained a position out of doors despite uncomfortable weather until long past the hour fixed by the astronomers for the collision, and were only driven home by a pelting rain that began to fall. There were many who were afraid to venture from their homes, and preferred to die by their own firebrands if the expected death was to come. Three cases of insanity through fear of the destruction of the world were reported by the police, and prominent physicians who were seen predicted that many cases of nervous prostration and possibly death would result from the intense strain upon the nervous systems of the weak and superstitious.

A REMINISCENCE.

The South Once Produced Her Entire Supplies—Why Not Now?
There has been a good deal written on the subject of the South's producing what she uses. The Warrenton Record in discussing the matter touches it as follows along a line that usually escapes mention:
"Many of our readers remember the four eventful years of the war between the States. There was scarcely a home in the country which was not made sad by the death on the battle field or in the hospital, of some loved one.
"And yet there are some things we forget. During the four years of that memorable struggle, the South was cut off from the rest of the world and thrown entirely upon its own resources. The great bulk of our able bodied men were in the army and only the old men and the women were left at home. No meat or other supplies could be gotten from the North, and yet we produced not only an abundance for home consumption, but enough to supply the immense armies fighting for the South.
"...If we could then produce at home, the enormous quantity of food-stuffs required to support the armies of the South, beside an abundance for home consumption, why can we not do it now? We have the same soil and climate and are surrounded by much more favorable conditions."
NEW MUSIC.
"Richard and his sweetheart Nell," song and chorus, quarto, sent free to any address by Studebaker Bros. Mgr. Co., South Bend, Ind., on receipt of stamp to cover postage and mailing. The verses relate the story of a drive taken by Richard and Nell. The title page has an elegant picture, specially designed by the artist, Gray-Parker, showing Richard and his sweetheart about starting out on their memorable drive. The words, of course, constitute a love story. The share in it of the Studebakers is merely incidental. The melody is delightful, and was composed for the words by the well known musical writer, W. F. Sells.
FIVE DOLLAR PREMIUM
Will be given to the person who composes the best three or five verses poetry containing the name of Big Ike in each verse during the next thirty days. No person under ten or over sixty years old will be allowed to enter the contest. Each composition will be placed before a committee of three of the most prominent citizens of the city of New Berne. Here the youngest and the oldest have the same showing, each rewarded according to merit.
