MONEY CROPS.

MR. EDITOR :- While it is important that the farmer should produce as large a proportion as possible of the articles which are always needed in the family, and which must be obtained either at home or abroad, it will also be necessary for him to grow some crop, or manufac-ture some article which can readily be converted into cash. For, with the most skilful management, the farmer will find that there are many expenses which must be paid with money. these purposes is not, as many seem to suppose, comprised in the one idea of a strict economy. It is true, economy must be practiced. There must be as waste, for waste is always ruinous. But economy is only one of the incidentals. Some men have practiced this virtue to a grinding extent, and yet not got along well in the world. Economy is necessary, but with nothing else to help hin the farmer is as bobly off as an engine without fire or water. He must practice economy, produce all that he can at home, and, as far as possible, exchange his surplus articles for those which he is obliged to buy. Both of these principals will be considered in their appropriate places. By closely following them the farmer will be enabled to keep the cash expenses of his business down to the owest point. But when all this has been faithfully done, he will find that there are many calls for money-calls which it is abso-lutely necessary that he should promptly everything he needs and should raise of his farm.
