THE JOURNAL.
 W. H. HARPER - Proprietor.
 C. F. HANCOCK - Local Reporter.
 Entered as second-class matter, March 27, 1879, at New Bern, N. C., under post office No. 1122.

The Galveston News says the corn and bacon idea has taken hold of the Texas farmer, and they will be no longer dependent upon Western granaries and hog pens. The corn and bacon idea is one that ought to be elaborated all over the South.

That was a very flighty proceeding of Mrs. Moore, of New Haven, Conn., when she fell down three flights of stairs with her baby in one hand and a lighted lamp in the other. But she was well balanced, lit right and didn't hurt either the baby or the lamp.—Wil. Star.

A Washington correspondent of a New York paper is authority for a statement that the President has ordered that no more fourth-class postmasters be removed unless they have served four years or there are charges made and proved against him.

Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, of the New York World has almost completely lost his eye-sight, and this has worried him into nervous prostration. Nobody seems to know when he will return to this country, and as time goes on the belief grows that he has followed James Gordon Bennett's example and intends to spend most of his time in Europe.

The St. Louis Republican remarks that the country is under obligations to Mr. Cleveland if for nothing more than for his friendly attitude towards the Southern States. He is the real reconstructor of the Union, and it will be a union to the prosperity of which the Southern States will contribute more and more as they are left free to work out their future unmoled by the sectional malignancy which so long kept them in poverty.

MANUFACTURERS.
 It is not every town that can become a manufacturing center, any more than every port can become a commercial emporium, but evidences are constantly accumulating that the South will at some time in the future manufacture goods in the vicinity of her cotton fields.

This will not be accomplished in a year or a generation, but that is no reason why we should not work to further the movement. He is no philosopher who lives entirely in the present and gives no thought to the future. It is not to be expected that every manufacturing venture will be a success. There will be failures, and "those who have expectation in their eyes will lose hope." But the movement will go on until the entire crop of Southern cotton will be spun and wove in the region where it is grown.

Some there are who believe that the multiplication of factories will militate against agricultural interests, but this cannot be, inasmuch as every factory established in the South brings a market to the planter's door.

Hitherto fabrics manufactured in the South have been almost entirely heavy goods, but several of our mills are now turning out fine goods which compare favorably with the products of the long established mills of New England. Five years ago Georgia plaids, products of the Eagle and Phenix Mills of Columbus, ranked in England and Germany with the very best American goods. Indeed the Eagle and Phenix had a standing order from Germany for all the goods they could deliver.

But, not only is there a demand for the manufacture of cotton goods but factories of all kinds are needed at the South. Diversified labor stands next to diversified crops as a potential agency in working out the redemption of the South.

A PRETTY SURPRISE.
 A beautifully illustrated and charmingly bound edition of Longfellow's "Evangeline," the most popular long poem ever published by an American author, and one of the most famous poems in the language, recently published, is a pretty surprise for book-lovers. It is in large type, numerous and excellent illustrations, very fine and heavy paper, gilt edges, remarkably handsome cloth binding, combining in delicate colors, blue and white and silver and gold. No illustrated edition has ever before been published at less than $1.50, and that is about what you might "guess" the price of this to be, but it isn't—witness our offer below. Every home in the land ought to have a copy of this Evangeline, so charmingly beautiful, as a poem, as a collection of artistic illustrations, and as a product of the book-making art.

By special arrangements with the publisher we are able to offer this book to the subscribers to this paper as follows:

EVANGELINE and DAILY JOURNAL, one year.	$5.50
" " " " " " " " " " " " " "	3.75
" " " " " " " " " " " " " "	1.50
" " " " " " " " " " " " " "	1.25
" " " " " " " " " " " " " "	.75

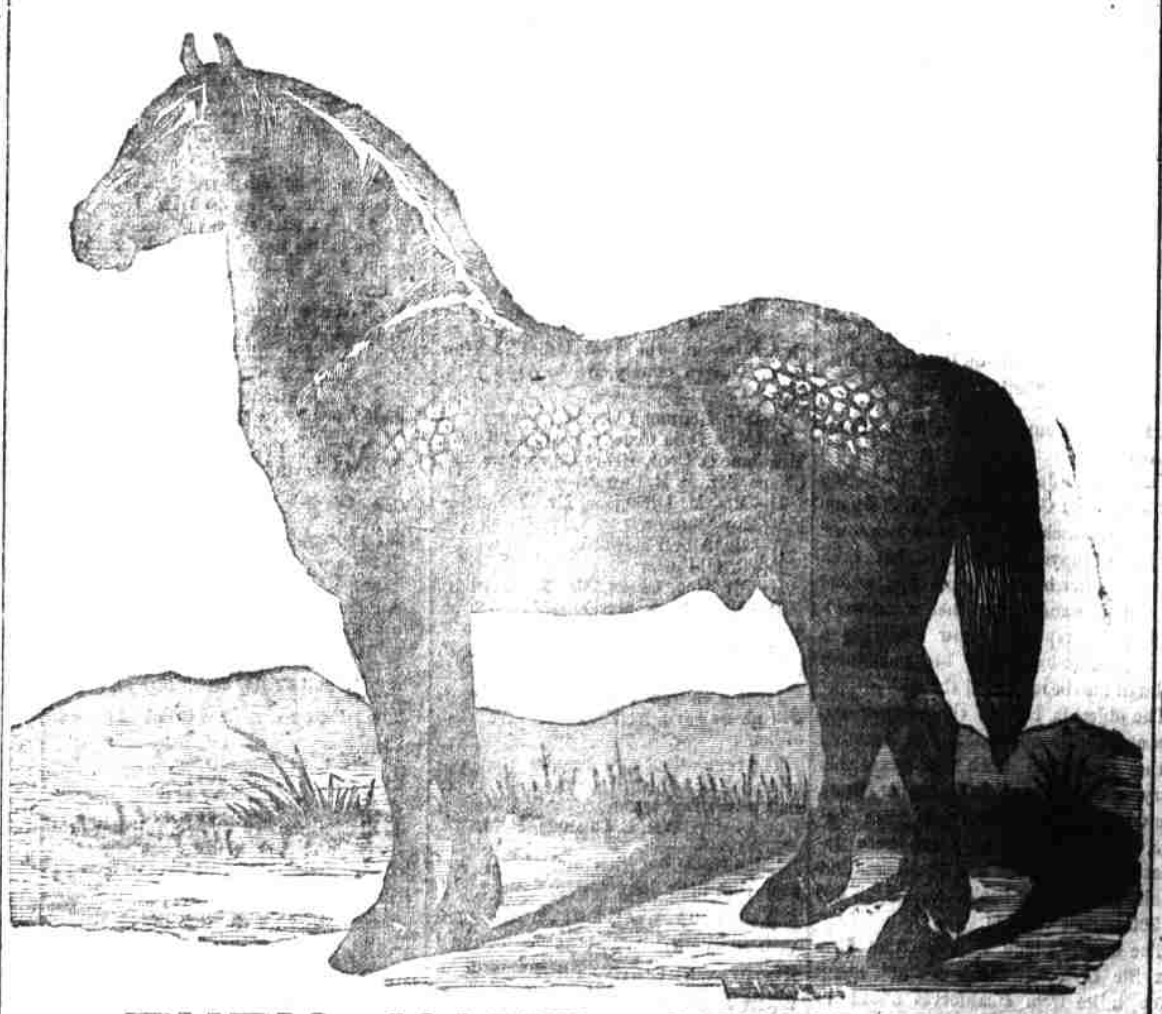

Under no circumstances does this proposition hold good except where payment is made in advance.
