Carefully Selected Items for the Housewife.

The Many Uses for Brushes—To Remove Coffee and Ink Stains—Manicuring the Hands—Other Valuable Hints.

Besides the various kinds of brushes used for scrubbing, keep one exclusively for washing vegetables; potatoes, turnips, beets, etc., can be more easily cleaned in this way than in any other.

Use a small tooth brush for cleaning around the handles of cups and tumblers, and for dishes with rough surfaces or raised designs; keep it convenient and it will be used often. I keep mine in a drawer of my kitchen work-table, beside my silver polish, chamamois skin and other useful cleaners.

I have found a small paint or varnish brush, costing five cents, a useful accompaniment to the larger stove-polishing brush, as it can be made to reach into corners where the other one will not go.

A nail brush for the cook's and the children's use is indispensable. Of course there are dust brushes, scrub brushes and tooth brushes. I only mention those which I do not find in general use, but which are useful in making easier the work which many deem drudgery.—Portland Transcript.

Manicuring the Hands.

In manicuring the hands, they should first be softened by submersion in tepid water, in which have been placed a few drops of ammonia and a small piece of Castile soap. The cuticle around the nail should then be carefully loosened with the little spoon-shaped implement provided for the purpose—never with a knife, the use of which is always detrimental. The nails should be filed into a round oval shape, avoiding the French point, which is no longer in vogue. Should the rough pieces of skin known as "hangnails" appear, they should be cut away with a sharp pair of scissors, and should never in any circumstances be torn out. They will soon cease to be troublesome if the hands are carefully and systematically treated.

The white spots which so often disfigure the nails are said to be directly attributable to physical debility. They are by no means easily got of, but a little refined pitch mixed with myrrin, laid over them at night and rubbed off in the morning with a bit of cocoa butter, is said to be an efficient agent in removing them.

Painting on Chamamois.

Painting on chamamois leather is a style of decoration which is still used for dress trimmings, and for various household ornaments. The natural ecru color of the leather is sometimes preserved, though quite often the leather is stained to a different color. A design in dark yellows, shading into the natural color of the chamamois, is probably as effective as anything else. Small pieces of this work have been in use for some time, but large hangings are now made decorated in the bold, effective way which gives the best result in this material. Quaint belts, with long, hanging ends, designed from old peasant costumes, are decorated in this way.

Removing Coffee Stains.

Coffee stains should be wet with cold, soft water before being put into the wash, and will usually be found all right when the laundering is done. A surer way is to run boiling water through the fabric, which will carry away the stain at once. Where an especially fine damask suffers from this cause it is recommended to apply a mixture made from the solution of yolk of egg in clear water, with a few drops of wine added. Allow the solution to penetrate the fabric thoroughly, then wash out with clear, soft water and the stain will be gone.

The Odor of Musk.

The most potent of all perfumes, musk and attar roses, are imported from the East, but are too powerful, especially the former, for European tastes at the present day. It was, however, the favorite scent of that most elegant of royal ladies, the Empress Josephine. Down to the epoch of the destruction of the palace of St. Cloud by fire, during the war of 1870, the dressing room of the suite had been used to occupy, and especially the drawers of the bureau she had used, were redolent of that odor. The mortar employed in quelling the now ruined Mosque of Zobeide at Tauris was mingled with a quantity of musk by the party of the masons engaged in the work, and to this day the surrounding atmosphere is highly scented with it, especially when the sun shines upon the ruins. This extraordinary durability of the scent producing quality has brought about various interesting experiments. A French chemist once exposed a small quantity of musk after weighing it to the rays of the sun in a closed room. After a certain period the musk was again weighed and was found to have lost no perceptible portion of its substance, even when the minimum lens were applied. Yet the scientific experiment calculated that the volume of perfume evolved from a quantity of musk estimated to amount to no less a quantity than $7,000,000 of perfume.

Tee Ozar of Russia found an egg on his table Easter morning, which contained within it two ivory death's heads, a silver dagger and a slip of paper on which was written the legend, "Christ has risen; we shall also rise again." That egg smelt of a hatchling of Nilibista, and the Ozar would give a quarter to know who sent it, but he would give no quarters to him. —Wil. Star.

YOU GET STRONG, if you're a tired-out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy?

The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor.

For ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that safely, and permanently cures.

The town of Guerro, Mexico, has been captured by the rebels, defeating Gen. Hernandez.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J. When Billy was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had children, she gave them Castoria.

BIG IKE DOES NOT REQUIRE SO MUCH OF KATIE MELVINE.

Oh charming Katie! your letter I've received, But must acknowledge I'm somewhat deceived. I'd like to accept you, pour out my tea, But cannot be the angel, your expect me to be.

I forward care in a manly way, To give a response to all that you say, Unless your queries are equal to mine, I cannot accept them my Katie Melvine.

You may keep the house dear just as you choose, Spend what I can spare you for dresses and shoes, I may sometimes be worried when coffee is black, But I'll turn my my nose, and on it turn my back.

I'll moderate expenses and times that are hard, And not pry too often in the pantry at lard, And not tell my wife that the cook is a rogue, If she's economical and good with the board.

I'll not war around like a second Goliath, Provided you do not ride out with Fritz Gower, And not flirt with the widows across the way, In case that you keep all the widowers away.

I'll not smile at the girls on the street, Or treat them, if you can with me complete.

I'll try to be home at the hour of six, But must read papers, and talk politics.

I'll not be presumptions when at a ball, And should dance with you in preference to Paul.

If the German lasts long, I will not be dumb, If you do not address me, to taunt as a dun.

I'll not drink, but smoke, if I choose I must chew, I'll not use naughty words, unless provoked so to do, I'll try to look neat, be kind and sweet, And buy what I'm able for you on the street.

I'll call you an angel, who only need refer to, If such you prove to be, and all other things, And if you're an angel you'll always be fair, And no other woman can with you compare.

And this is the answer from Noble Big Ike, If it is agreeable, we'll join then for life, My answer I forward, and hope it will find, A ready acceptance, with Katie Melvine, Hoping to hear from you soon, Your future intended, in warm despair.
