The Atlanta Constitution's comments upon the President's message charges that Mr. Cleveland adopts the Republican views on the subject of the repeal of the Sherman act.

The house caucus yesterday adopted resolutions pledging support to the repeal of the Sherman act concurrently with the adoption of a bill for the free coinage of silver, and appointing committee to draft such bill.

The Ohio Democratic State convention is in session. The race is Neal against the field. The former is a free silver tariff reform Democrat and his chances are said to have been injured by the President's message.

Why is gold returning from Europe? The Sherman law drove it out, quoth the Goldbug humbug. It is still in force. Why comes gold back? The Sherman law has nothing to do with either the going or coming.

Many free silver Democrats stayed away from the House caucus because it was a conference of free silver men and not a caucus of Democrats. The caucus appointed a committee of whip as a steering committee. Mr. Bland thinks he will get his measure through the House in six weeks.

LOCAL NEWS.

These are pretty hard times, but who knows what may be in the future. A German chemist says he has discovered a process of converting wood into flour, and a Bavarian chemist says he can reduce wood to a flexible fibre, which may be spun and woven into cloth. When a cord of wood can be ground into flour and woven into clothes, won't this old world be the lazy man's paradise—if some one will apply the cord of wood!

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Big Ike—Dress goods.
B. R. Hill—Feed, &c.

The season tickets for the colored Fair will be for sale at Gaskill's Pharmacy and also by the secretary, W. W. Lawrence, at the Custom House. They will be on sale today. The price is $1.00.

If the JOURNAL had done nothing more than to have gained the confidence of its subscribers that would be a great deal. Two subscriptions were received for the Daily yesterday, both paying a year in advance.

Mr. A. C. Pryor, general agent for North Carolina Commercial Building and Loan Association of Richmond, Va., is in the city for the purpose of organizing a branch association here. He informs that he is meeting with very good success.

The schooner Addie Henry was libelled yesterday by Deputy Marshall C. B. Hill for salvage on complaint of Geo. G. Howard. Bond was given and she was released from custody. The case will be heard before Judge Seymour in chambers on the 6th of September.

The Washington Gazette is informed that Mr. Henry Lewis killed a bear in Chocowinity township on Tuesday, which weighed about 300 pounds. It says bears are plentiful in that section and large parties are having great sport hunting them.

A number of our business men express much regret at the discontinuance of the Show Fly on the A. & N. C. Railroad and state that nothing less than twelve months could have been a thorough test as to whether it would have paid. By all means it appears to us that the full business should have been tried.

Seven more certificates in the order of Tonti have matured and the owners have received their cash. The papers for the money were sent off on the morning of the 7th and the checks arrived on the 10th. They footed up $5,929.26—the members had previously received $1070.74 as sick benefits and this completed the $7,000.

Rev. P. S. Swain, State Sunday School Evangelist, gave an instructive lecture at the Church of Christ. The history of these schools was briefly viewed, showing that they were of divine origin, and while they had made strides in influence and growth the field for development was still very large. It was a plain, practical talk and calculated to be of much benefit.

Coming and Going.
Mrs. J. C. Watkins and child, of Greensboro, came up from Morehead to visit relatives.

Miss Myrtle E. Pope left to visit relatives in Kingston and Snow Hill.
Mr. T. G. Wilkinson, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., left for a visit to his home in Clausen, S. C. Mr. Willie Stallage has charge in his absence.

BANK PONY PENNING

A Very Successful One—Description of the Way of Holding.

The pony penning near Morehead Thursday was well attended, about 400 people were present, some as spectators, but the majority as spectators, and those who had never before seen the experience was a novel one. Many ponies that used to be changed owners during the day. The penning was considered a very successful one.

The banks on which the ponies range extend from Beaufort to the Portsmouth, a distance of several miles. They have several pens on different portions of their length. There are three pens. This penning was held at the middle pen which is situated at Morehead about three miles from Morehead.

At eight o'clock, at five o'clock the pen could plainly be seen from the landing, with a throng of people standing around or perched on the top.

A walk of about half a mile along a path that lacked much of being the pleasantest we ever travelled brought us to the place.

The pen is simply a square, the enclosure measuring 75 or 80 feet each way with an opening at the center of one side through which the ponies are driven. The strips of which the enclosure is made are strong but narrow and leave wide spaces between them. This gave ample opportunity for a good view of the operations.

When we arrived only about a dozen ponies were standing around. They were all halted and standing quietly. We were informed that one had not already been penned, these retained from the number and the remainder ranged loosely. Another day about 200 in number was in the distance approaching.

This was our first experience at a penning and though we had many times conversed with persons who had attended them frequently our ideas were quite different in some respects from the reality.

We had always thought of the driven ponies as forming a turbulent, excited, lightened mass, but instead of that they were jogging quietly and contentedly along in a line stretching from the sound to the ocean side of the banks and with only about a half a dozen men behind them to keep them going forward.

As the pen was approached from the South the drove was headed off on the North side and driven into the pen with very little difficulty. The entrance to the pen was not closed at all except by the standing of a number of men there, their presence proving a sufficient check to any tendencies of the ponies to break out.

Having been penned, the catching of the ponies that were wanted began. They finding their elms shut in on all sides, became as might be expected, quite restless and moving constantly from one side to another, but into the midst of the surging throng would jump and grasp the pony sought. All resisted—some only a little, a few strongly—pulling the captor around the pen a time or two but it would take only a short time before a halter or bridle would be on any, and this being accomplished the pony would calm down astonishingly and struggle very little if at all against being approached, led about or tied.

The ponies for sale were offered to prospective purchasers as fast as led out. The highest price we saw charged was $75. Colts sold as low as fifteen; and some beautiful and very desirable ponies were sold at $35 and $40 each.

A few of the colts were branded. They were thrown down and tied or held for the purpose; the branding irons (the owner's initials or other mark) being heated to a high degree were clapped and pressed against them for a moment. The little animals did not take this part of the performance in a good humor by any means.

Not long after this drove of ponies was gotten through with, another, a small drove numbering about twenty five, were driven up and as we walked away at two o'clock another good sized drove of fine ones, probably 150, were just entering the pen. Up to this time we judge about five hundred ponies had entered the pen.

The ponies were driven up faster and in larger numbers than at the average penning. The reason was that public notification having been given and a better crowd than usual expected special preparations to show them a good penning were made by having droves of ponies that were grazing at points somewhat remote from the pen driven to where they would be more readily accessible.

Dr. Latham, of Baltimore, Dead.
Dr. Fayette M. Latham, of Baltimore, died Thursday morning, Aug. 10, of consumption at Culpepper Court House, Va., where he was visiting his parents.

Dr. Latham married Miss Annie S. Blackwell, daughter of Mrs. James W. Carmer, of Baltimore, and niece of Mrs. W. F. Rountree of New Berne. She is well known to many of our leading citizens, who sympathize with her in her bereavement.
