We see that Mr. W. D. Barrington ha added Mr. J. F. Hanff, a dry goods man of long experience. He is getting ready for his share of the fall and winter trade. In speaking of the general cry of "dull times" that has been heard from some for two or three weeks, Mr. Barrington calls attention to the fact that just now is the time of the whole year when a slacking up of trade may be expected. This is especially true of the dry goods business as it is getting too late to buy summer goods and the time has not quite arrived to purchase fall ones and true of business in general because we are now just be tween two seasons, that of the late truck and summer fruit on the one band and the fall crops on the other.

Mr. Barrington says he notices and that he considers trade now is as good as usual at this season—he finds it so with himself at least, and now that the fall crops are on the eve of coming in, and as fall and wluter supplies need to be pur-chased with the proceeds he looks for trade in a short time to present the acstomed activity of those seasons,
