Verdict in the Roanoke Shooting.

The coroner jury in the Roanoke; Va. tragedy have rendered a verdict that the eight men who were shot down during the reign of mob law on Wednesday night came to their death "by weapons in the hands of men or soldiers of the Roanoke Light Infantry, under command of Capt. John Bird and other officers," and that the evidence showed that he was acting under instructions of Mayor Trout. The jurors think it best to recommend that the grand jury or other competent court or authority take charge of and investigate the legality of the acts of the said officers.

The verdict is received with general favor there, it being considered, in fact, all that the jury could justifiably find from the evidence in the case.

Progress of the Directory Work.

The Directory and Encyclopedia of the city being gotten up by Messrs. Hatchett & Watson is about ready for the publishers. The more progressive and appreciative of our people have either taken advertisements or subscribed to the book.

When it is considered that it was largely through the instrumentality of these gentlemen that the houses are numbered and the census taken, as a means to secure free mail delivery, together with their low charges, they should be largely patronized. Every person having business interest in New Berne will be benefited by its publication, and its encouragement is a good investment for both the city and individuals.

RISE AND FALL.

Of the Oyster Canning Industry in North Carolina.

Part First—Its Rise.

ED. JOURNAL.—Continued from our correspondence from Raleigh, the Norfolk Virginian concerning the oyster and oyster interest of North Carolina. The question is asked by the JOURNAL, why should not native capital be invested in this industry—meaning oyster canning?

I wish to ask the JOURNAL if native capital has not been employed in this industry, and if so, if the native capital has not met with the same fate of foreign capital—that is if all the factories built there established by foreign and native capital have not failed.

Why is it that all of the canneries in the State were closed last year but two and they, not making expense, will be closed this year? Why is it that nearly all, if not quite all, of the slushing houses that were in operation a few years ago are now closed? and most of those slushing houses were owned and operated by native capital? There exists some cause, what is the cause?

What seems to me to be the first thing to settle is the cause of the death of the industry in this State. With your permission I will give the chief and principal and whole cause of the destruction of this, the greatest industry in this State. In doing so I will show why neither native capital nor any other capital can be invested in this industry in this State.

Yes, you are right, and I am correct. To prove that the present laws of the State are destructive to the oyster industry, we will not go far back, as it is unnecessary; we will take that period when the industry was growing and flourishing in the State and compare the legislation of that period to the legislation of today.

In 1887, our Legislature enacted a law entitled, "An act to promote the cultivation of shell fish in this State." When this was enacted there was but one cannery then in operation in the State—that one was Moore & Brady's in this city. The oyster business was then in its infancy here and under the healthy influences of the Legislature of 1887 and '88 the oyster industry continued to grow and flourish. Capital invested in the oyster industry was paying a good dividend; labor finding its employment, and all manner of foreign and New Berne was feeling the salutary effect of this, their young but growing industry.

In 1889 our law makers seeing the good effect of the Legislature of 1887 passed an act entitled "An act to protect the oyster interest of the State." The legislation was supplemental to the legislation of 1887. The effect of this legislation was to prohibit the importation of oysters into this State and to prohibit the growing industry it would be protected, several other canneries were built, slushing houses were opened, until in the winter of 1890 and '91 not less than eight canneries were in operation in the State and over thirteen slushing houses. Over a half million dollars was employed in the payment of labor and for the purchase of oysters during the oyster season of 1890 and '91 over three thousand laborers were employed at the canneries and slushing houses, beside the oystermen engaged in catching oysters on the rocks or beds, and those engaged on boats transporting oysters to the canneries and slushing houses which were many hundred more.

The oystermen were thrifty; labor was commanding good wages; all eastern North Carolina looking upward and onward and all due to the benign influences of the legislation of 1887 and 1889, which legislation was in effect for the protection and promotion of the oyster interest of the State.
