All the civilized world will await with keen interest the outcome of the struggle of the Man of Blood and Iron with the King of Terrors.

A new material is proposed as a substitute for leather. It is called "flexus fibra," and is derived from flax, suitably prepared and oiled. It has the same appearance as leather, is particularly supple and takes a polish equally well with the best kinds of calf. The material is said to possess great tenacity, while affording great ease and comfort to the foot when made into shoes. Flexus fibra, being of vegetable origin, is also said to facilitate free ventilation and thereby to obviate the discomfort arising from what is called "drawing" the feet.

Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the North Carolina Conference met in session at Centenary M. E. Church in this city last night. A good many visitors besides the delegates were present.

After the singing of a voluntary, a male quartette, devotional exercises were conducted by prayer from Rev. L. L. Nash, of Wilmington, and spiritual reading by Rev. J. A. Cunningham.

Miss Minnie Willis, daughter of Rev. R. A. Willis, made the address of welcome in words that were strikingly appropriate for the occasion.

In the absence of Miss Lena Hutchins, who was detained from attending the conference by sickness, the response was pleasingly read by Miss Sue Beckwith of Raleigh. That beautiful missionary hymn "The Kingdom is Coming," was then sung by the choir.

The annual address was delivered by the President, Mrs. J. A. Cunningham of Raleigh. It was a splendid address and will read. It briefly took up the work of missions, showing what was being accomplished and the great need of further pushing forward the missionary cause.

At the close of the service Rev. Mr. Willis announced that a reception would be tendered all delegates and visitors present at the residence of Mrs. K. R. Jones.

The conference will meet this morning at nine o'clock. Visitors will be welcome to all the meetings.

Helen Russell's English Sports at the Opera House Monday Oct. 2d.

Helen Russell's English Sports proved a drawing card at the Opera yesterday the house being crowded at both matinee and evening performances. The company is unquestionably one of the best burlesque organizations on the road and their performance is full of vim and mirth and enjoyment.

The first part is styled a "Rehearsal" and it affords opportunities for the introduction of farcical and musical specialties of exceptional brightness and merit. Among those which received greatest applause were the serpentine dance by Misses Russell, Fleming, Hagel and Rose Montaine; Turner and Russell in a musical comedy sketch; M'Il Lucie in phenomenal dancing and Fred Barth in his imitable funny business.

The performance closes with a burlesque in which the girls go through the gassy movements of an amazonian march, with red lights and pink lights forming a dazzling picture. Philadelphia Press.

NORTH CAROLINA AT CHICAGO.

A Tribune Reporter Goes Through the Exhibits of the Tarheel State.

"What a fine display of products of North Carolina!" The reporter of the Tribune asked in all the geographical, in forty years ago, and a year ago. "Fair, pitch and turpentine." But if any one will visit the North Carolina exhibit in the Agricultural Building and take a walk with H. G. Goffe he will wonder how the nickname of "Tarheel State" ever has been applied to this beautiful country.

"Fair, pitch and turpentine," he said to a reporter for the Tribune, "yes, we raise tar, pitch and turpentine, and it is a great industry. The world would pretty nearly stand still but for our tar, pitch and turpentine. I was talking with an agent of the Russian Government the other day on this subject and he got so excited that he just packed his grip and started for North Carolina. He is down there now investigating our products and thinking he is doing a great thing for his people."

"Tar, pitch and turpentine are your principal products then?" "Yes," he said, "I know the old geographers were right, but we have repudiated them long ago. Why, North Carolina is the garden spot of North America. We raise everything that is good down there. Our State is 500 miles wide, from east to west, you know, and in that space we have every variety of products. The seaboard is covered with pines. We grow over a pine grove if you ever get to the mountains, and health and pine."

The Northern people put a great deal of pride in their pine country, especially those who have pulmonary complaints. The very atmosphere is so pure, so sweet, so healing. As you sit in the shade of your cabin drinking in the balsam, perfume and rest to the singing of the wood thrush, the long-billed wren, the other notes in the world, you realize why you would feel forgiveness for your enemies, you believe that God has made that earth is heaven, and then suddenly your eyes close and you dream that you are sitting on a golden stool and listening to the singing of angels and celestial ambrosia. Tar, pitch and turpentine, yes, we have pine trees, but besides the pine trees we have more than thirty other kinds of shade of nut in North America."

"What, for instance?" "We do not grow sugar to sell, but just to show that we can grow the best sugar in the country and to supply enough sugar for home consumption. All this, mind you, in the poorest of our State, which produces the tar, pitch and turpentine that you talk about."

"Vegetables! What would you northern people eat if we didn't raise vegetables? We have the greatest market gardens in the pine country on the globe. Look at these potatoes, tomatoes, peas, celery, cauliflower, egg-plant."

"MALAY EXHIBIT IN AGRICULTURE." and small fruits that we grow. We sell $7,000,000 worth of them every year. Kalamazoo thinks he has a corner on celery, but she is wrong. We mean to knock the spot out of her celery beds in just two years. What do you think of this line of fruits in glass jars? Talk about California. Can California show anything like these! Just look at these peaches, pears, plums, apples—yes, and grapes. We raise every grape that California does, and a wonderful grape that originated down our way, that California has never raised. We are making wine too. Most of our wine exhibit is in the vegetable section of the Horticultural Building, but here you see a few samples. Here is a bottle of our champagne. And just sample this hand-made whisky, please. People that drink it grow purer, wiser, and happier all the time."

"Any cereals in your country?" "Just back of you. There you see samples of our corn, wheat, oats, barley, and buckwheat. You Western people think you raise the best corn. But if you could eat one heeecake made out of North Carolina corn you would burn your corn cobs, and come and get seed from us. You are simply not in it with us when it comes to cereals, or grass crops, or forestry. This bundle of orchard grass, six feet tall, and the exhibit of G. W. Vanderbilt of Buncombe county, near Asheville, away off in the west end of the State."

"What about Vanderbilt's place, anyway?" "Biltmore! Great place, 60,000 acres, finest climate and prettiest scenery on earth. Vanderbilt goes in heavy for farming and forestry, not for what he can make out of them, but, as he says, simply to teach the tar-heels how to develop their State. He is making a great palace down there, on the side of the mountain, as you know, and has just constructed a $27,000 marble tennis court in connection with it. But there is a fly in Vanderbilt's ointment and Vanderbilt has run against a snag down there that all his money can't remove."

"You see he naturally wants all his land continuous and wholly private to his own uses. But he had to acquire it piece meal and when he got it he found that he had completely encircled a little farm of ten acres belonging to an old negro named Sam. What is more, Sam had an easement over the Vanderbilt estate for ingress and egress. This did not worry Vanderbilt any at first. He just sent his agent over to buy Sam out, but to his surprise Sam refused to sell."

"They have never got him out yet. When Sam refused to sell his farm for what it was worth Vanderbilt offered him a trifle more than it was worth. But Sam still declined to sell. Since that time numerous advances have been made in the offer, without effect. When asked why he was so obstinate Sam simply said that Mr. Vanderbilt was the best neighbor he ever had and he wanted to keep him. So there they are, and Vanderbilt has so peace because Sam can drive his ox cart straight through his magnificent grounds."

"We should not pass from the earth without leaving traces to carry out memory to posterity."

"IT OUGHT TO BE STOPPED."

It Now Costs North Carolinian More to Ship Their Products to Each Other Than to Send Them Beyond the State.

The Morehead City correspondent of the Kinston Free Press replies to Fair Play and gives more facts about the railroad and express charges. In the reply he lays blame, to some extent, on both the express company and the railroad. The correspondent gives being abolition of the latter and goes on to say:

"We again thank 'Fair Play' for pitching into the railroad about rates of freight on fish from here to Newbern, and we pledge our word that if we were an official of the road we would try to stop this, and it ought to be stopped. There is no reason in the world why the people of the 'Old North State' should not have cheap rates as well as the Yankees. We can ship a barrel of clams from here to New York for 75 cents and there are thousands of barrels shipped there annually while the rates in the State are so high that not 100 barrels are shipped anywhere in the State."

The correspondent has struck a right chord. Freight rates in the State ought to be such that every place in it can trade with any other place.

The East has fish and vegetables which the West wants and which we would be glad to sell there. The West has fine fruits—among them the best apples in the world—and we want to get an abundant share of them, but high freight rates lay a strong hindrance of traffic between the two localities.

Again, our State has good and productive coal mines, but we believe that beyond localities immediately contiguous the north supplies all that is used in the State.

Each and every citizen of the State should take pride in using North Carolina products when he can do so as advantageously to himself and each corporation in the State should feel it a duty to bring about such a condition as will give the State products, other things being equal, an advantage in the markets of the State over those from beyond its borders.
