He exhibited one at the JOURNAL office that had three perfect shoots protruding from its lifeless body from one fourth to one half an inch in length. ## Cedar Grove Cemetery.

Having a little leisure time a few days ago, we took a stroll through the cemetery, together with information upon certain points, but not at that time, with the thought of sending nothing to the printer. But the "Memorabilia" today, "grow" into an article.

Ordinarily, a cemetery would be considered a place of solemnity and repose, but a good deal of crime, however, seemed to gather around it, and at the outlet about the first thing that came upon, was a levy of very young ladies who asked us to show them the place where it said.

which they considered a very awful thing to say particularly on a grave stone. Much as we wished to disappoint the little ladies, we were unable to find a stone even with the assistance of the sexton, and were forced to believe that it did not exist.

Next we were told of a certain monument which embodied in its construction, an urn, by means of which it was said communication might be made with the person in the tomb.

This correspondence was carried on chiefly by school children in their "note." Whenever a new pupil could be found confiding enough for the purpose, he was gravely told that if he would approach carefully, lift one side of the tomb gently and softly whisper under it the question "What was your father's name?" he would hear the dead man say, "Mother." The "victim" would then be asked, "What was your mother's name?" and of course the secret beneath would say nothing—as promised. All which was very simple and easily obdying to all concerned.

The next tale related into our ear was to the effect that so many years ago there were on the Centenary mound a number of pipes of six or eight inches in diameter, rising a foot or two above the ground, for the purpose of ventilating the vault beneath. Occasionally a "country man" looking about in the vicinity, would be taken in hand by some officiously kind friends, and have imparted to him as a profound secret and special favor, the information that through one of these openings communication might be had with those sleeping below, and that a question asked would meet with a ready response. While one graciously showed him to the right place and explained the proper way to propound his question, another would carefully wander to the opposite opening, and for a rope pour into it a hoarse, rough inarticulate sound, which reverberating through the dark chaos, would be delivered into the waiting ear of the hungry and thirsting one—a long drawn, soul stirring, blood curdling groan, which would state him into a freezing ague for the balance of the day. It was small consolation to be told: "To be sure you must have said something they didn't like."

Although the cemetery was not opened by Christ Church till 1890, it contains the bodies of a number of persons, which were removed from the old churchyard, the death of some of whom occurred at a much earlier date. The oldest monument or memorial is a small gray soap stone slab, of our eighteenth century pattern erected over the grave of a four year old girl, and bearing date 1781. Dr. Holmes says:

"Little of all we value here Wakes on the worn of its hundredth year, Without both looking and feeling queer."

But this tablet, after the lapse of about ten years more than a century "wakes" to show itself almost unimpaired by the touch of time, and with its quaint inscription clearly legible—except a word broken by some forceful impact, perhaps accidental.

The sentiment, or epitaph is from Dr. Young's "Narcissa," and may serve to show the literary and poetic taste and mental inclination or status of a family of whom nothing more is now known, or will ever be known.

"Sweet harmonist! and beautiful as sweet! And young as beautiful! and soft as young! And gay as soft! and innocent as gay! And happy—if aught happy here—as innocent!"

For fortune had built her nest on high, Like birds quite exquisite of note and plumage, Transfixed of Fate—who looses a lofty mark— How from the summit of the grove she fell And left it unharmonious."

Only the last two lines are cut on the stone.

This grave-stone, with its date of 1784, connects us back with a date anterior to the vital day of our nation—to that interregnum between the dissolution of the Continental Congress, after the signing of the treaty of Peace at Paris, (Sept. 8, 1783) and the inauguration of Washington, (April 30, 1789) during which, we had no government, and like the occasional Biblical record of the Jewish nation "every one did that which was right in his own eyes."

(To be Continued.)

German at Hotel Albert. Ed JOURNAL.—One of the most pleasant incidents of the opening of Fall and Winter pleasures of Newbern's society was the "German" at the Hotel Albert on Friday night. While the attendance was not superfluous, it was large enough and of such caliber as to lend prestige and pleasure to the occasion. If the personification of this opening of the dancing season be an indication of what is to follow during the winter, Newbern's society can congratulate itself. The gentlemen were in full dress, while the costumes of the ladies, were most elegant.

Steamer Vaneboro. On and after October 2d, and until further notice the steamer Vaneboro, T. G. Dixon, Capt., will sail for Kingston every Monday and Thursday making all landings. Office and warehouse foot Craven street.

Gymkana Races.

A variety of ludicrous races known as Gymkana races are coming into great vogue at the north and it is proposed to inaugurate a series of the races in this city to take place at the Fair grounds.

The first meeting of the Gymkana Races will take place at the Fair grounds on Wednesday next at 8:30 p. m.

This sport is now very popular north and consists of not only trials of speed but of skill in riding and are very amusing to the lookers-on.

To give an idea of the sport to the uninitiated one of the series of races will be as follows:

Each rider will be given a wooden spoon in which an egg must be carried from start to finish. Should any rider drop his egg he must return to the starting point and get another egg and start again.

Then there is the needle and thread race, umbrellas and cigar race, potato and bucket race and many others.

Admission for gentlemen will be 10 cents, ladies free.

Quite a number of the young men have signified their intention of taking part. After the sport is once tried it will no doubt be repeated often.

The little admission fee which is charged is not for the purpose of making money for anyone or organization, but simply to pay for the little premiums which will be awarded to the winners in the races.

Are They Obscene?

For the last five or six years theatrical performances throughout the whole country have been elevated to a much higher plane than formerly, simply because public sentiment was turning against the coarse and disreputable performances that at one time so much infested the country.

This is not the first time that our public streets have been posted with obscene pictures, but that is no reason that they should be thrust on our main thoroughfares openly and boldly, despite the wishes of those who oppose them.

We know but little about the troupe but have heard that their star actress was one of those high-kickers that kicks eight feet. Also we have heard that they were not allowed to play at one place in this State, though we do not know how reliable that is. We do know that there was some opposition to their appearance in Raleigh as the following quotation from a Raleigh correspondent to the Charlotte Observer shows:

The English Sports Company has for the past ten days decorated the theatrical bill boards with many light colored pictures, in which young ladies in more or less undress were represented as disporting themselves.

Last evening there was a rumor that a citizen here would take legal steps to prevent the company from performing in the academy of music, and that he had written the mayor a letter protesting against the pictures. But this morning none of the pictures were missing and the officials questioned said no attempts had been made to stop the play.

This afternoon talk about the matter was revived, and it was alleged that the person who objected to the pictures had consulted lawyers with a view to stopping the play this evening. So many people who otherwise might not have gone to the performance decided to go in order to see if there would be any legal developments.

Not only is the posting of these indecent pictures in the most public place in our city revolting to a great many of our people but we believe it to be an open violation of the State law.
