Superior Court.

MONDAY PROCEEDINGS.
Court convened at 11 o'clock, Judge Bynum presiding. The following was the Grand Jury:

C. D. Bradham, foreman; W. C. Toler, Chas. J. Atkinson, N. J. White, J. W. Everington, Saml T. Lancaster, J. R. Buck, W. N. Laughinghouse, Jacob Dove, col, J. P. Voliver, F. D. Arnold, R. F. Daugherty, John H. Hawkins, Oliver Fisher, W. B. Wiggins, Albert Fulcher, Jas. F. Hartley and J. B. Hartley.

The Judge's charge to the grand jury was rather longer than usual. It was comprehensive in scope, remarkably clear in statement and explanation, severe on wanton evil and mild in his directions for dealing with cases which might by a strained point be brought under the law, but which common sense would tell were not such as the law was designed to reach.

There was a feature of the charge well worthy of note. The Judge did not content himself with directing the jury as to what cases they ought to present. He dwelt upon the other side also and charged the classes of cases they ought to keep out of court. He reminded the jury that the object of the law was, by the punishment of offenders—making an example of them—to deter other evil doers from the commission of crime, that children of tender years would not serve as such a public example and that where cases were brought up where the punishment adapted to it would be a chastisement at home, a presentment ought not to be made, and that in other cases they ought to consider whether the bringing of case to the Grand jury was through envy, hatred or malice, and also to use their judgment as to whether bringing a case up, would have a beneficial or injurious effect; if the former it should be presented to court, if the latter, it should be withheld.

To illustrate the last, he told of a case that once came before him: Two women had a slight quarrel and a little hair pulling. It quieted down almost at once, but the time was near court and the case was taken into it, a large number of witnesses were examined, costs to the county of $150 or $200 made and a neighborhood feud engendered, which it would take years to remove—the effect was injurious, the case ought to have been let alone. Space will not permit us to dwell further on the charge, though it is well worthy of it, because of the many points brought up not usually touched upon on both the positive and negative duties of Grand Jurors.

In the afternoon the following cases were tried: State vs. H. J. Jones and Nicely Jones, F. & A. Not guilty.
Fred Ipeck, carrying concealed weapon. Not guilty.
J. J. Ipeck, carrying concealed weapon. Not guilty.

Mt. Calvary Temple.
Sunday afternoon Rev. J. F. Butt conducted the last service of this conference year at Mt. Calvary Temple, the congregation numbered about fifty people. As Mr. Butt thinks the probabilities are that next year he will be located elsewhere, it may be the last "one he will ever hold there."

Mr. Butt may be justly denominated the founder of this house of worship. His holding of Sabbath afternoon open air meetings in the neighborhood led, when it was sought, to the donation of building material by our mill-men and merchants and the erection of the plain structure in which the worship since that time has been conducted.

That congregations as large as this one can be retained Sabbath after Sabbath in the winter, in as primitively constructed a building as the Tabernacle shows conclusively that vital interest is felt in them. In summer we have seen the attendance so large that the house would not hold all and numbers would gather around outside.

The meetings have unquestionably done good and we hope to see them going on increasing in strength. Money expended in making the building more comfortable for winter use, and work done towards promoting interest in them will be efforts well placed.

The Fayetteville Water Works Company is putting in an electric light plant, and will illuminate that town, the old contract having been canceled.

We noticed a very fine Patridge Cochon Cockerel was shipped to South Carolina from the Union Point Poultry yards, yesterday morning by express. New Berne is making a good name on fancy Poultry.

Chicago, the latter part of last week had the thermometer to register two degrees below zero. In St. Paul on the 23d the thermometer registered from five to twenty-five degrees below zero. From other points in Minnesota and from North Dakota and Manitoba similar reports have been received.

The steamer Neuse brought in on her last trip a shipment of horses and mules for Messrs M. Hahn and Co. The lot is to be auctioneered off to-day and tomorrow. Our stock dealers have always pushed their trade and as a consequence they do a good business. New Berne livestockmen have good business capacity and energy, and alongside constant use of printers ink they are drawing patronage from a large territory.

The Waldenses.
The Waldenses who have come to join the colony in Burke county, are of the religious sect that cultured severe persecution during the Middle Ages, and come from the Piedmont section in Italy. The colony owns 10,000 acres of land in Burke, which will be divided into farms of fifty or one hundred acres and distributed to the heads of families. It is said they make the best sort of citizens, as they settle and go to work and do not join the idle population of cities. North Carolina cordially welcomes such immigrants as these.

Notice—Naval Reserves.

All ex-members who were in the rolls April 30th, are requested to attend and sign their pay receipts. All uniforms, arms or other property must be returned to the armory before this meeting is held.
