In judging others let us always think the best, and employ the spirit of charity and candor; but in judging of ourselves we ought to be exact and severe.

THE VETO.

The President has vetoed the Silver coinage bill. We hoped it would be otherwise, but we confess it was an unreasonable hope.

It is true that Mr. Cleveland had nothing to gain personally by an approval of the bill. The silver men have antagonized his administration from the beginning...

With the President's convictions of the bill it was his duty to veto it. Indeed he could not do otherwise.

If the bill is as defective as Mr. Cleveland represents it to be, he had right to veto it, but it is remarkably strange that the defects he points out failed to attract the attention of Congress...

It is a sad commentary on Congress that a bill, that has created so much anxiety and has consumed so much time, is found to be worthless-incapable of accomplishing the purposes for which it was intended.
