FIDELITY

"He that endureth into the end shall be saved." There is no greater virtue than Fidelity.

"The Courier-Journal learns that between the 4th of April and the 4th of May, 170 leaves of absence were granted to the members of the National House of Representatives on the plea of illness."

The words above quoted are taken from the excellent Norfolk Virginian. It is a blessed thing that Congress does not remain in session always, and that members are elected every two years.

There is a disposition among men to set aside public servants who have failed to carry out the wishes of the people. It is too often the case that the difficulties of the situation are not properly considered.

The ability to secure the passage of a bill is not the highest criterion by which a Congressman is to be judged. It is faithful to his trusts?

The simple fact that the present North Carolina delegation has failed to secure the legislation desired by the Democratic masses of the State is no reason for their retirement.

Rotation in office may be a good thing. It is a better thing to secure efficiency in the public service. When a Congressman, or any official, shows that he has missed his calling, the sooner a change is made the better it will be for the official and the public.

O. L. Rice, Mendota, Ill., writes: Have used your Japanese Pile Cure and found it a sure and permanent cure."

SHE SAVED THE BANK.

How Miss White Came to the Rescue of a Portland Bank.

The Faith of a Country Woman and Its Wonderful Effect on Frightened City Depositors—Abner Was Inclined to Be Critical.

"Do you see that woman drivin' by?" asked Mr. Yerrick of his nephew, who was assisting him in splitting kindling wood.

"I reckon I know Lucretia White. I didn't ask for information, but I can't impress upon you what a woman can do when she sets out," replied Mr. Yerrick, resting upon his ax.

"Well, two years ago, 'twas, she went as usual and got to the bank in good season; but there was a great line of people ahead of her, all a-crowdin' and a pushin' to put their money in, as Lucretia's passed, so she had to stand and wait for nigh on to two hours."

"At last her turn came, and she was pretty nigh worn out, but she spoke up sharp enough, as she always does, and says she: 'I declare, you're drivin' considerable of a business here. I've been a-waitin' considerable of a spell to put my money in.'"

"The bank folks was real pleased with her, and there was a piece writ for the paper about it. That's why I called your attention to Miss White, Abner," and Mr. Yerrick began splitting wood industriously.

"Maybe the bank wouldn't a' lasted anyway," suggested Abner, when opportunity offered. "Don't have such mean-spirited views 'bout your neighbors," replied Mr. Yerrick.

"Do they know the conductor and do not like to ride on his car, or what is it?" "Why, it's the horses," was the answer. "Don't you see these nags are white? There are lots and lots of people in this town who wouldn't be hired to ride behind a white horse."

"I said something about 'superstition' and the foolishness of persons who stopped to think about the color of a car horse, when the driver interrupted me. 'I'm not so sure about that,' he exclaimed. 'I've been running a car more than ten years and never had any accidents, but whatever bad luck I have had has been when I was driving white horses. I know a dozen drivers who don't like to get behind such a team as this, and every one of them has good reason for it, too. There's lots of gamblers and men who bet on horse races who are like those two women—you couldn't make them ride behind white horses when they are going to the races.'"

"Am I Married or Not."

Mr. A. despondently. "I declare, my wife is so nervous and irritable that I don't stay in the house a moment longer than I can help. My wife says that I am suffering from some functional derangement. I presume she is right. As a matter of fact, I have been married for some time, but she says I am not."
