OUR SENATORS.

The question has been asked why Senator Ransom, with all his oratorial gifts and wide experience has not spoken on the tariff.

His campaign speeches are matchless, and his tribute to Vance in the Senate is one of the gems of the English language.

Senator Ransom does not believe in long-drawn-out debates in the Senate.

It is very rare that any good is accomplished by speeches in Congress.

Senators and Representatives are not converted or even influenced by arguments made in the Senate Chamber or on the floor of the House. Indeed Congressional speeches are usually addressed to far off constituents.

Senator Ransom believes, or is reported as believing, that no good can be accomplished by a continuation of the tariff debate, but, on the contrary, he regards it of the utmost importance that the measure be passed at the earliest possible moment.

Senator Jarvis has spoken, and to the very general satisfaction of the people he represents.

There was no impropriety in his occupying a little of the time of the Senate. He is a new member, fresh from the people, and is wise right for him to give expression to his honest convictions. There is no need for Ransom to speak.

He is serving his people and has people faithfully, and it is to do them in due time to give an account of his stewardship.

We believe that the honor of North Carolina posture in the ranks of her Senators, and we shall feel that State loses much when a her of them retires from the place he fills so well.

We may differ from one or both of them on some questions of national policy, but in the grand average they turn up in magnificent proportion.

Judge Wexam's Prayer.

"In God we trust" is the only safe trust a statesman can have anything to do with.

When a statesman whose gifts started strong he seems to flog the way back.

Vercher is its own reward, but sum congressmen don't seem to keep much about claimin' the reward.

The tariff is a good deal in a pig in a poke.

If that was a penalty on law making as that is on law breaking it might be better for the country.

Liberty is sweet but it ain't with hunger.

Freedom we speech oughtent to mean anarchy un language.

One drop un corruption will spoil a bucketful un politicks.

This great and glorious republic un our haint got no use for partisan politics after campain is over.

Oh, what a Cough.
