CONSERVATISM.
 The time has passed when questions of national policy can be settled by radical measures. Labor is always conservative until maddened by oppression, and then it is that mad impeller to riot. Then it is that mad impeller to riot. Then it is that mad impeller to riot. Then it is that mad impeller to riot.

The business men of this country—farmers, mechanics, merchants and laborers, professional men and tradesmen, know full well that something is wrong in the conduct of public affairs. What that something is, is a wide diversity of opinions all leading to the conclusion that capital is oppressing labor.

There is an irrepressible conflict between capital and labor that is thrusting aside conservatism and seditioning justice. Labor and Capital are both to blame. They are too radical in their demands, and neither has the slightest respect for the rights of the other. It is perfectly right for capital to decide what it is able to pay to labor, but it is often the case that it is not willing to pay what it is able to pay, and by every appliance in its power it forces labor to accept the pittance it offers.

SHILLER'S CONSUMPTION CARE.
 This is beyond question the most powerful agent for the cure of consumption, cough, asthma, and all other pulmonary diseases. It is a pure vegetable preparation, and is perfectly safe for all ages and conditions. It is sold by all druggists and chemists.

THE SIGH OF THE IRON HORSE.
 The following poem is from a volume written by Smith Clayton, of Georgia, and dedicated to the Ladies' Memorial Association of Atlanta:
 The sigh of the iron horse and the song of the spindle mingle merrily, and, on eagle wing the new South sweeps to a great and glorious future; while in her wheel, with sad face and bowed heart, the old South bows lovingly over the sacred ruins of a brave but bitter past. But the South is still the South, and the grief of the old shall never be forgotten in the grandeur of the new, for between the two lies a sweet memorial which binds our hearts to the past, even while our hands build the future.

THE Faded Jacket of Gray!
 The violet's breath is not sweeter than the memories by which it is halloved—the shimmering stars are not more splendid than the glory amid which it was folded. Bring it forth to-day. With gentle hands smooth out these precious folds. A thing inanimate, it yet speaks with most eloquent tongue, its solid front tells of the dust of righteous battle, and its ragged edges voice the cruel scars of vanquished veterans. It tells the solemn but grand story of thousands of bright swords which sprang from their scabbards at the call of duty. It tells of the fiery charge—the stubborn fight—the bleeding hero—the dead patriot—the adroit retreat—the muffled drum—the sable plume nodding above these Godlike men who gave, and gladly gave, all that is best in life (safe honor) and life itself, for liberty! Every nation has its memory, both dark and bright; every seam images some patriot's daring deed; its very silence is the pathos of the honored dead!
