HE DEFEATED THE VIRGINIA MACHINE

MONTAGUE, CONGRESSMAN, TWICE BEFORE WHIPPED THE ORGANIZATION.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Governors of States have long looked upon the United States Senate as a goal of their ambitions. Many admit that they used the Governorship as a stepping stone, and the roll of the Senate shows how many of its members followed that familiar route.

It has been an unusual thing, however, for former Governors to aspire to seats in the House of Representatives. They have seemed to regard the lower branch as beneath the dignity of a former Executive of a State, losing sight of the fact, perhaps, that a former President long sat in that body and felt honored at the privilege of serving a constituency there.

When Andrew Jackson Montague, former Attorney-General and Governor of Virginia, announced his candidacy for Congress, therefore many people wondered if he were altogether sincere about it. They wondered if he meant to make a genuine campaign or if he were merely a "receptive" candidate.

But it didn't take the distinguished Virginian long to remove all doubts about himself. And it didn't take him long to show that he looked upon the office which he sought as worthy of the best brains the country has.

And Montague was elected. He won out against Capt. John Lamb, who for a generation had represented the Richmond district in the house. He defeated a candidate backed by a powerful State organization, a candidate whose colors had never before trailed.

Twice before, Montague had been victorious in Virginia campaigns. In each he had made machine politics his issue and in his fight against Captain Lamb he followed the same course. He was elected Attorney-General as an anti-organization man. He was elected Governor as an anti-organization man. He was elected to Congress as an anti-organization man.

It is to Montague that the people of Virginia owe more than to any other one leader, the movement against a political organization designed and maintained for the purpose of perpetuating itself in power.

Until John Garland Pollard was chosen in the primary for Attorney-General the other day Montague was the only man in the State who had led a triumphant fight against the organization within his party.

But Montague cannot point to an unbroken record. He was a candidate for the United State Senate eight years ago against Senator Thomas S. Martin and was decisively defeated by that master of practical politics. Virginia has never turned down Senator Martin when he was himself a candidate for office.

He defeated Fitzhugh Lee, former Governor Tyler, Montague and William A. Jones, the only four candidates who ever opposed him.

Montague, however, has shown that he can come back by coming back. He is now in the House of Representatives and is in a fair way to stay there as long as he can be useful to his people. His Democracy is simon-pure progressive. It was progressive when he was Attorney-General. It was progressive when he was Governor and it is progressive now. He is a firm believer in the Wilson policies and he promises to take a commanding position in the leadership of the present House.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS SOON TO BEGIN FALL TERM.

Many of the rural public schools of Craven county will open during the next few weeks and S. M. Brinson, County Superintendent of Public Schools, has for the past week been engaged in making an inspection of these schools and getting things in readiness for the opening of the fall term. Prospects for a very successful term are very encouraging, says Mr. Brinson, and the attendance will doubtless be larger in many of the schools than ever before.
