AN ARTISTIC SUIT.

Bartorial Inspiration From the Orient.

OF GRAPE TUSSORS IN BROCADED DESIGN

This novelty tailored suit designed for the autumn is made by a famous dressmaking establishment of Paris. The fabric is grape tuSSors in a brocaded pattern. The suit is trimmed with printed silk in Post-Impressionist effect and with plaited chiffon. The coat is a modified cutaway affair, showing vest and skirt of an oriental type and a tunic of brown chiffon. The inspiration is derived from modern art and oriental form.

New Fields in Which to Earn Money.
Spurred by the high cost of living the self supporting woman is developing fresh versatility in the way of opening new fields in which to earn money.

One business woman leases a seven room apartment, retains four rooms for herself and her mother and rents the three remaining rooms at $15 a month each. With such an arrangement almost the entire rent of the apartment is paid by the roomers. This woman has run a self supporting establishment on this plan for two years and recommends the idea as the most satisfactory way of maintaining a comfortable home.

"I don't believe in starting such a venture," she says, "unless a woman has the necessary furniture and is naturally fond of housekeeping. To go in, debt for the furniture means a struggle to catch up which takes away much of the pleasure of the arrangement."

"With even a few hundred dollars ahead to meet one's rent in case rooms are not taken...I see no reason why my plan should not appeal to many business women who are now living in tiny rooms in boarding houses. There is nothing co-operative in our arrangement and the three women who room with us are free to leave at any time. I take all the financial risk."

"We have a laundress twice a week, and one day a woman comes to clean. Our rent is practically nothing. We get our own breakfasts and go to a boarding house in the neighborhood for our dinners. With the present cost of food we have found it more satisfactory to follow this plan."

Use For Old Mat.

If you have a rubber doormat you are not using for its specific purpose or if you can get another mat for the door and put the rubber mat in the kitchen you will not regret the change. Placed in front of the sink, before which the cook must stand so much, it will afford great relief to the feet. Notwithstanding so much has been said and written about women sitting to do what work they can, the majority will stand, and if anything so easy to provide as a rubber mat will add to their comfort it should be furnished.

The Pocket Workbox.

The tidy and provident woman will delight in the rolls containing cottons and needles of such convenient size that they may be carried in the purse or pocket. The rolls, which are made of leather fastened with a patent susp., contain three small reels of cotton, a needle book and thimble.

When You Burn Your Cake.

It sometimes happens that even with care the bottom of a cake or bread is burned. Do not try to use a knife, but take a coarse grater and grate the burned surfaces with it, and the burned part will be taken off without breaking or disfiguring the cake.

In London.

American women living in London have their own group, known as the Society of Women in London. The club has its clubhouse and through its various committees makes its influence felt in art, education and philanthropy.

The Parson of Cinnamon Gulch

By WILLIAM SINGLETON

It was Sunday in the mining camp on Cinnamon gulch. But the day was not being respected as in civilized communities.

However, word had been received from the Rev. Arthur Dixon that he had been sent out by a society to start the people on a different course. He was coming among them to remain as long as necessary, which meant to build a place of worship.

About 10 o'clock on this Sunday morning a man came up the gulch whose appearance did not seem to indicate that he was especially fitted for the work in hand. His face was red, he wore a stubble beard, and his apparel was by no means clerical. In deed, it was the ordinary costume of the country—sombrero, flannel shirt and trousers tucked in his boots. Taking a position in the center of the cabin, he said in a loud voice:

"Friends, I have come among you to eject Satan from your midst. The sight I see on this Sabbath mornin' is one to appal the heart. Instead of washin' up and puttin' on your best clothes for meetin', instead of mothers brushin' the children's hair and puttin' clean aprons on 'em for Sunday school, some of you are workin', some playin' cards, while the women and children are doin' whatever they take a notion to do."

The stranger paused, and the miners who had been gathering about him while he was speaking wondered. They had expected a sleek looking, clean shaven gentleman in clerical dress, who would talk to them in a soft, persuasive voice. This man was rough and uncouth—indeed, nowise superior to themselves. However, it is questionable if this very ruggedness did not incline them to receive him more favorably than one more refined.

"I reckon," resumed the newcomer, "that you've been advised of my bein' sent out to convert this camp. I'm the Rev. Arthur Dixon, and I'm purty well used to sich as you. You thought you was goin' to git a smooth talkin' gent with molasses candy hair and mild blue eyes. The society ain't sendin' that kind of men round to do their work, or, rather, the Lord's work. Their kind is sent to places where there's been some sort of cultivation."

"What I'm goin' to do is tussle with the devil and throw him out. Just as when a man's goin' to plant he gets rid of the stumps and weeds and all that. Them fancy parsons wouldn't be no good for that. Their work comes in when the seed's planted and springin' up. When one o' them felers comes yere I goes on to another place where there's no clearin'."

By this time the whole camp—men, women and children, though there were few women and fewer children—were standing in front of the parson, gaping at him. To one or two who found room in his rear he said savagely:

"You loolts come forward where I kin see you. That's one o' Satan's best dodges—to git in a feller's rear and take him from behind."

Those addressed came forward. "Now, I want you people to understand," the parson continued, "that the first thing needed in bringin' about a new deal is that when you get together for purposes o' worship you do it with humility. There's no humility in a six shooter nor in a knife. I want every one of you that has weapons on you to take 'em up there"—pointing to an open space between trees—"and leave 'em there durin' these yere religious ceremonies."

The speaker paused, and a number of the men went to the spot he indicated and then threw down their weapons. When he was satisfied that all the arms were where he had order ad them deposited he said that the first thing to do in the premises was to build some sort of place where they could meet for religious worship. They nominated one of the men to pass around the hat for contributions.

While the collection was being taken up a young man of a different type came into the camp, approaching the parson from the rear. When he caught sight of the speaker he opened his eyes. He was especially interested in his remarks made from time to time exhorting the miners to contribute liberally.

The collector, having gone the rounds, took the hat to the parson, who emptied the contribution into his pockets, then drawing a revolver from each boot, covered the assembly.

"Stand where you are," he said, "for I'll put a hole in any one that moves! Any man leavin' for them weapons won't get more'n a yard!"

He began moving away from the congregation, keeping his face toward them, and backed right into the man who had just come upon the scene. Feeling a pair of arms clamping him about his body, he wriggled to get away, but to no purpose. Presently one of the congregation, taking advantage of the diversion, jumped in and grasped the weapons. That ended the dispute. The so called parson was downed and securely bound.

The young man who had turned the tables was the real Arthur Dixon. The man who had personated him had met him and learned of his purpose. Hurrying on ahead of him, he had hoped to play his game and get away with the plunder before his arrival.

The real Dixon in saving the miners from robbery acquired a support that enabled him to do a great work. He revolutionized the camp.

For the Children

Prince Knud of Denmark Belongs to Boy Scouts.

The king of Denmark's two sons, Crown Prince Frederick, fourteen years of age, and Prince Knud, thirteen, have been sleeping under canvas as boy scouts. The camp, which was established near Copenhagen, was international in character, 8,000 boys from several European countries having gathered for a boy scout demonstration.

When the king and queen visited the camp and reached the hut where the princes were the queen's motherly eyes observed that little Prince Knud had dirty hands. For which she gave him a royal scolding. Some of the other boys interceded, saying:

"Don't be cross with little Knud. He's all right, although he is a poor washer up. You had better teach him when he gets home."

The king could not help smiling and promised the boys that the matter should be attended to.

The two princes have had private tutors, but after vacation they will go to a high school. When Prince Knud's picture was taken he didn't have his boy scout uniform on.

The Curate.

A curate and vicar are chosen and as many trades or professions as there are players and when the curate has said to the one he wishes to attack, "I come from your house, Mr. Optician or Mme. Milliner (or any other tradesperson he chooses), but I did not find you in. Where were you?"

The person asked replies: "I was at (whom ever she pleases to say)—hair-dresser, tailor, jeweler, etc., provided the business has been taken. The person mentioned asks: "What were you doing there?" And the one questioned must answer something suited to the trade mentioned.

For instance: If he has been to the bookseller's, he says he was buying books. If to the grocer's, buying sugar or starch. The bookseller says he was at the binder's, who demands: "What were you doing there?" "Getting a book bound."

A forfeit must be given when something is said not suited to the trade mentioned. They may also say they have been to the curate's, and when he asks: "What were you doing there?" is answered: "Getting married," or anything relating to his ministerial duties, and he must make a proper reply.

Magie Music.

One of the players is sent out of the room, and the rest of them agree upon some simple task for him to perform, such as moving a chair, touching an ornament or finding some hidden object. He is then called in, and some one begins to play the piano. If the performer plays loudly the "seeker" knows that he is nowhere near the object he is in search for. When the music is soft, then he knows he is near, and when the music ceases altogether he knows that he has found the object he was intended to look for.

About Glassmaking.

Glassmaking was at one time the most aristocratic of all industries. A French law passed under Louis IX, allowed none but men of noble birth to set up glassblowing establishments, or even to work therein. For many centuries this was the only trade noblemen could venture to work in without any danger of losing caste. The art of glassmaking reached this country through France, and in its early days in England those engaged in it styled themselves "gentlemen glassblowers."

In Vacation Time.

Sometimes in my vacation days, Before it is September, I peep into my books to see How much I can remember. To me it is astonishing How I've forgotten everything. The maps are full of foreign lands; The copy-books seem crazy; The grammar's Greek so tongue me speak; The history is hazy. It even seems absurd to me That when I was seven, sixty-three, The holidays so surely change. Old things from what they were And make familiar people strange. Why now, if Christopher Columbus met me at the door, He hardly know his own name.
