A GOOD TREAT FOR OUR READERS

We are pleased to announce that we have made arrangements to give to THE JOURNAL readers a feature far above the ordinary. We have secured the right to publish "The Hollow of Her Hand," a fascinating story written by one of the most popular authors in the world. George Barr McCutcheon has written many good books, among them being "Graustark" "Beverly of Graustark," "Truxton King" and "Brewster's Million's," but this new story has been declared by competent critics as the best story he has ever written, and it is with a feeling of pride that we can announce have secured this story for our large family of readers.

If each reader of THE JOURNAL bought a separate copy of this book it would mean an outlay of more than $10,000, because you cannot buy a copy for less than $1.30. But you may read it in THE JOURNAL without cost. We will put into the majority of the homes in this section without cost to them, one of the most popular books recently published.

It has cost us quite a sum of money to be able to publish this story, but if it pleases our readers as well as we think it will, we will be repaid.
