DIRECT GUNFIRE FROM AIRSHIP

GERMAN AVIATOR, HIGH ABOVE HOSTILE ARTILLERY SAID TO BE SIGNALING

LONDON, Aug. 29.—From two miles of the fighting in Belgium which reached here today, it would seem that German aviators have some tricks of aerial warfare which they have kept entirely concealed and which are unusually effective.

The Times have a dispatch from Paris describing the part an aeroplane is said to have played in the artillery battle about Mons. This machine, a biplane, capable of cutting down its speed to a slow rate, hovered at a safe height over the Franco-British artillery position, and actually directed the fire of the German gunners.

Its observer watched the effect of shells fired by the Germans. Then by means of a large disk which was swung at the end of a line and could be raised and lowered at will, he signalled as need in code "Higher—Lower—right—left" and thus guided the gunners (who naturally could not see their mark or the effect of their fire) until they were making hits at almost every shot and creating great havoc.

The second story brought here by an Englishman who fled from Belgium, described the manner in which bombs are fired from the Zeppelin dirigibles by an ingenious arrangement which makes the airship itself comparatively safe from harm and, at the same time renders the aim of its bombardment much more accurate.

The refugee said that the immense airship comes to a stop—or as near a stop as possible—above the city or fortification it wishes to attack, at a height out of range of either artillery or rifle fire.

Then by means of a steel wire rope 200 or 300 feet long it lowers from one end a small wire cage, just large enough to contain a man and a supply of bombs. This cage is so fortified with steel netting that rifle fire against it is ineffective. At the same time it is so tiny a mark that artillery cannot be pointed with sufficient accuracy to hit it.

And if it should happen to be struck of course, the airship proper would be safe, only one man would be lost, and besides, when he fell, his supply of bombs (unless they were exploded in mid air by the shot) would fall with him.

The Zeppelin, presumably equipped with at least two cages and cables, might at once lower another bomb fier.

"FURIES" ARRESTED

They Wanted to Scold Home Secretary for Forcible Feeding.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Gen. Miss Flo Drummond, Mrs. Dacre Fox, Miss Richardson and fourteen other militant suffragists were arrested this morning in front of the Home Office, where they had gone to try to interview Home Secretary McKenna on forcible feeding of prisoners.

When they were refused admission they attempted to force an entrance. A hostile crowd gathered and the women were threatened. At this juncture the police appeared and took them into custody.

A number of women demonstrators have been released lately through the King's clemency.
