GREAT WILD WEST SHOW HERE MONDAY

HUNDREDS OF VISITORS WILL BE IN THE CITY TO SEE PERFORMANCE.

Monday is 101 Ranch Wild West day in New Bern. This fact will be accentuated by the arrival of the big show today. The show comes from Greenville, and is scheduled to reach the city at an early hour, but no matter how early it may be it is foregone conclusion that there will be a crowd of curious people on hand to see the sights and scenes incident to the unloading of the trains, and the erection of the tent city.
This is something that, to a large extent in the community has a resistless lure. With the 101 Ranch show the early morning hours are particularly interesting because the Wild West people ride their horses to the show grounds and they are attired in the characteristic costumes of the ranch, just as they will appear in the arena.

The 101 Ranch is a big show. According to report it is much bigger than when it exhibited in the South two year ago. It has however, it is said, retained the characteristics that gave it distinction at that time, and it is still a "real" Wild West in every sense of the word.
As before much stress is laid upon the splendid ranch-bred horses, the herd of buffaloes and the long-horned steers, which are utilized so successfully in the exhibition. The Indian village is also, it is announced, still an important feature of the show. There are over two dozen big and little tents in the Wild West encampment, and they all have an important function in the exhibition.

The first event on Monday will be the parade. This year's procession, it is announced, is all new, and many features not hitherto seen in Wild West parades have been introduced. There is an Indian village on wheels; buffaloes ride on a big float; steers have elevated perches on tableau wagons or are ridden by pretty cowgirls; a band of Indian squaws illustrate, with ponies and travaux, the traveling methods of the migratory redman; cowboys, cowgirls, Mexicans and Cossacks give color to the display by their picturesque variety of costume; an old stage coach brings back former days on the express route from Bismarck to Deadwood, and a prairie schooner revives memories of overland mail. The line will be over a mile in length, and will pass over the principal downtown streets. It starts at 10:30.

The exhibitions take place at 2 15 and 8 15. Doors will be open an hour earlier. The performance will open with a grand review of the Wild West notable with the show. Among those who will be introduced to the audience will be Jos. C. Miller, White Chief of the Poncas, and one of the owners of the show, who will ride his Arabian horse, Ben-Hur and utilize a silver mounted and jeweled saddle valued at over $5,000; Chief Iron Tail, the noted Sioux warrior whose profile is on the new nickel; Rocky Mountain Hank, the last of the oldtime express messengers, who bears the scars of many an Indian scrimmage; Long Lance, the head of the Ogallallahs; Tomy Kerman and Hank Durnell, the greatest among cowboy ropers; Idgie Lindsay, Beatrice Brosseau, the Parry Twins, Bessie Herberg and other noted cowgirl roughriders; princess Wenona and Edith Tantlinger, the little Indian shapshooters, and many others. These people, with scores of others scarcely less clever, will, it is promised, combine in giving a performance that for "go" and strenuousness has never been equalled.
The Indian attack on the pioneers' camp; the capture and punishment of horse thief; the sports and pastimes of ranch life; exhibitions of bronchobusting with "outlaw" horses and many other incidents will, it is expected, keep the audience in a constant state of pleasurable excitement. The Wild West camp will be re-erected on the Ghent Grounds. Seats will be on sale all days Monday at the Wood-Lane Drug Store.

It is not surprising that local people have been greatly interested in the coming of the 101 Ranch show to New Bern. The remarkable battle between the 101 Ranch Wild West and the Ringling circus which culminated in Norfolk last Monday created wide comment. Both shows did an enormous business and the verdict of press and public was, that each show was the world's greatest in its class. The Norfolk Ledger Dispatch called the 101 Ranch show a "tidal wave of daring," and the Virginia Pilot declared that the show was a "success in every way," fully living up to its reputation, and deserving the applause and praise of the public. Evidently the people in this vicinity cannot afford to miss this typical Western show.
