White Men Will Work On Roads

PROVISION HAS BEEN MADE FOR THEIR ENTERTAINMENT.

White men who in the past few years have been sentenced to serve terms on the Craven county chain gang, have had an Ich Gabibble expression on their face when the judge passed sentence. The reason for this was due to the fact that there were no accommodations at the convict camp for white men, and the commissioners did not want them to be placed with the negroes. However in the future those white law breakers who are sentenced to the county roads will go there, and in fact there is now one white man doing time on the chain gang. This man is Henry Conner, and he enjoys, if such it might be termed, of having a tent and sleeping quarters all to himself, and does not have to associate with the blacks. Arrangements have been made to take care of the white members of the chain gang, and hereafter it will not be an unfamiliar sight to see the whites breaking rock, and improving Craven county's roads.

SUCCESSFUL MEN

JOHN JACOB ASTOR
America's first millionaire, was a very far sighted man. He left the little village of Waldorf on the Rhine to come to this country of wonderful opportunities to engage in the business of selling pianos, but he soon learned that there was more profit in the fur business. In good years and bad years, he prospered because under all circumstances he was a rigid economist and close trader.
By the close of the eighteenth century, he was the richest man in the United States. Then, as his wealth continued to grow, he did something which nearly everybody thought was foolish. He bought land on Manhattan Island, far beyond the developed section, which to the ordinary vision was not likely to be encroached upon by the then little city for generations to come. The wisest men in New York said he was inviting ruin, tying up vast sums in unproductive land that meant nothing but taxes. But he kept on buying land. In 1818, he died leaving an estate worth over $30,000,000.

Land in New York made the Astor estate what it is today. Real estate is the foundation of wealth. There are a few men right in our own county who will become wealthy by dealing in real estate. At present time they are accumulating
