

UNC Professor Writes Book

The Columbia University Press announced recently the publication of "Management of the Industrial Firm in the USSR: A Study in Soviet Economic Planning," by David Granick.

Dr. Granick, currently on leave from Fisk University, is research associate in the Institute for Research in Social Science and Visiting Lecturer in the Department of Economics here.

The basic question of Dr. Granick's book is how the Soviet planning system integrates the thousands of industrial plants in the USSR. The conclusion is that it is done by leaving major entrepreneurial powers to plant managers. Concentrating on the role of top management in individual firms of heavy industry during the years 1934-1941, the author explores those aspects of economic planning in which plant executives play a direct role or in which their actions are immediately affected by other groups.

MOVIE SCENE—Lana Turner is more preoccupied with her nails than with Bonar Colleano's proposal of marriage in this scene from "Flame and the Flesh," romantic drama by M-G-M. Pier Angeli and Carlos Thompson, a new movie actor, also have top roles in the new offering. The movie is filmed in Technicolor on locations in Naples and the Italian resort towns of Positano and Amalfi.

Ex-UNC Student Is New York's Most Glamorous Taxi Driver; Has Had Varied Life Of Adventure

An ex-sea captain who went to the University here for two years and then quit "because I didn't have the sense to appreciate an education in those days," now is probably New York City's "most glamorous taxi driver," according to a feature story in the Times this week.

He is Arthur Mace Gwyer, who attended UNC from 1935 to 1937. Here is part of the Times' piece: "It does not require a survey to indicate that Mr. Gwyer is probably New York's most glamorous taxi driver. In the first place, he is six feet four and has the face, figure and clothes of a professional model, which he once was.

"In the second place, he was born rich, although he overcame that 'handicap' by running through his inheritance with the greatest of pleasure. In the third place, he is married to the former Dorothy Aylesworth, daughter of the late president of the National Broadcasting Corporation. "And in the fourth place, his life has not been spent in a rut. He has been a tennis professional, an actor, a seaman, and during World War II he was a skipper of tankers in the Atlantic ...

"We live with just a touch or two of the old days—like a gold telephone," he says.

"But why does he drive a taxi? "I'm happier than ever in my life," he answers. "Before I started hacking seven years ago, I asked myself what could I do better than other people. Well, I could string a tennis racket, sail a boat, and drive a car very well. I was bored giving tennis lessons at country clubs. I had spent 10 years at sea and wanted to settle down in New York, where I was born and had friends. So I took a job driving cabs for a fleet.

"About one year ago, with loans from a bank and a relative, I bought my own cab for $11,000. I'll have it paid off in half of normal time. Then I'll buy another cab and hire some good driver I know, and so on until I have a fleet of four and can retire from driving myself."

'Stabat Mater' 'Brilliant Climax' To Chapel Hill Choral Season

A large audience gathered at Hill Hall Sunday evening to hear the annual commencement concert presented by the University Music Department.

The occasion marked the first performance in Chapel Hill of Antonin Dvorak's great oratorio "Stabat Mater". The work was sung in the original Latin by the Chapel Hill Choral Club, accompanied by the University Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Joel Carter, and ably assisted by the following four soloists: Durham; Catherine Latta, contralto, of New Bern; James Wood, Bass, of the Duke University Music Department, and our own William Whitesides, tenor.

The "Stabat Mater" is a celebrated Latin Hymn reciting the Seven Sorrows of the Virgin at the Cross, forming part of the early church services during Passion Week. Its authorship is not definitely known, and it has been attributed to Jacoponi da Todi or Jacobus de Benedictus, Italian Franciscan of the thirteenth century.

Apart from its traditional plain-song it has had many composed settings dating from the early Josquin des Pres, Palestrina and Pergolesi through to the nineteenth century composers Schubert, Rossini, Verdi and Dvorak.

Sunday night's performance gave evidence of careful and devoted preparation and under the authoritative baton of Prof. Joel Carter a fine tonal balance was achieved. The soloists acquitted themselves admirably of their exacting roles. The performance of the work in general proved a real esthetic experience. Certainly it was a brilliant climax to a season of fine programs. — LILLIAN B. GOLDE.

Dan Decker New Exchange Club President

Dan Decker, one of the charter members of the local Exchange Club, was chosen president of the civic group at its meeting this week.

Other officers elected were Vice-President Charles Holloway, Secretary Ted Tillman, and Treasurer Charles Stancell. On the Board of Control are Doug Yates, Wallace Williams, and Jack Golden.

They will be installed at a ladies' night supper at the Ranch House on June 26. The present officers are President Bill Tyler, Vice-President John A. Weidinger, Treasurer Whid Powell, and Secretary Charles Holloway. The outgoing Board of Control is made up of William D. Blake, Coy E. Durham, and Dr. Duncan Getsinger.

In other business, the club discussed its project of erecting large signs at the north and south and Glen Lennox bypass entrances. The signs will advertise Chapel Hill as the site of the University. The area will be landscaped. Mr. Stancell is chairman of the committee looking after it.

The Exchangeites also talked about holding an outing in July for the Cub Scout pack here.

Help Needed For Hospital

"With many of the regular volunteers planning to be away much of the summer there is a special need for extra volunteer help at Memorial Hospital at this time of the year," Mrs. Bruce Strowd, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, said today.

Mrs. Strowd requested those willing to volunteer their services to call Mrs. William Sprunt, chairman of volunteer services, 9-9766, or Mrs. M. L. Jacobs, supervisor of volunteer services, 9031. The auxiliary president pointed out that no experience is necessary to roll bandages, sew on machine or by hand, work in the hospital shop, and roll the book cart around.
