METHODIST MEETING

Many persons from the Carrboro Methodist church were in attendance at the meeting of the North Carolina Annual Conference of all Methodist churches of the state held at the Edenton Street Methodist Church in Raleigh Wednesday through last Sunday.

The Rev. J. Paul Edwards has been sent by the Conference to serve the Carrboro Methodist Church. The Rev. Edwards who replaces the Rev. W. G. Crutchfield, who served the church here for the past year, comes to this church from Roseboro, where he has served the Roseboro Methodist Church for the past four years. The Rev. Edwards has for the past twelve years served on three different churches, each one for a period of four years each. He is married and has two children. His father, the late Rev. J. R. Edwards, served the Carrboro Methodist church as his first pastorate in 1918. Many of the members of the church still remember the excellent work here of the late Rev. Edwards, and the church as a whole is most happy to welcome the son of a former pastor, as pastor of the church today. The new minister and his family are being most cordially welcomed by the entire community.
