Frederick Archer Dies In Washington

Funeral services for Frederick Archer, superintendent of Greensboro Schools, 1917-1928, were conducted at the Hanes Funeral Home in Greensboro Saturday at 11 a.m. by the Rev. William M. Currie.

Mr. Archer died at a hospital in Washington, D. C., last Wednesday following a brief illness. He was born at Mount Olive June 27, 1882, the son of Joseph and Frances Gray Archer, and was educated at the University of North Carolina and Columbia University.

He taught in schools in Windsor, Winston-Salem, and Wilson, and was superintendent in Selma before going to Greensboro in 1917. Following his Greensboro service, he was Superintendent of Schools in Louisville, Ky. In September, 1936, he joined the staff of the Extension Division of the University of Alabama, where he served for 16 years as consultant to public faculties and committees all over the state, participated in educational workshops, and taught in the College of Education.

Mr. Archer is survived by his wife, Mrs. Flora Thornton Archer; a daughter, Mrs. Donald D. Fowler; and three grandchildren, all of Alexandria, Virginia; two brothers, Gray Archer of Phoenix, Arizona, and Colonel Waine Archer of Fort Benning, Georgia; and two sisters, Miss Frances R. Archer of Chapel Hill, and Mrs. E. T. Robinson of Richmond, Virginia.

Turnips should be planted in rows, instead of the traditional broadcasted beds, according to State College horticulturists.

She arrived there a week ago Tuesday, the night before the real big blow of Diane, which hit the following morning, at about four o'clock. The wind was so fierce it blew the front porch off on to the top of the house and knocked the chimney over, doing $2,300 damage. They evacuated the cottage for the home in Wilmington, where they were safe from the storm. Dr. Gaston W. Glimpse Royal Party While In Scotland

The J. C. Lyons have returned from conducting another extensive tour of Europe with many tales and observations of the Old World. Prof. and Mrs. J. C. Lyons and daughter "Bootsie," and 31 students — 21 girls and 10 boys — from six states made the trip. The tour landed in Southampton and went on to London, where the members were allowed to view Parliament at work. In Edinburgh the tour was informed Queen Elizabeth and Philip were in town, but, added a guide, they would have little chance of seeing royalty. The guide mentioned the royal party would attend a private reception in a nearby village. The Lyons group hastened to the village and was able to get close-up pictures of the queen and her entourage — a high point of the trip. Then the tour wound through Brussels, Cologne and Coblenz, where the tourists visited famous champagne cellars, through the Black Forest to Lucerne, where some of the hardy students went swimming in the cold lake. The trip through the Dolomites, said Mr. and Mrs. Lyons, was a real experience. Mrs. Lyons told of her trip to the top of a 9,600-foot peak with a Duke student, Miss Nancy Saunders. They went up in a cable cage which was just big enough to hold two persons. At the top, they gathered wild flowers. Most of Munich had been rebuilt, but some scars from World War II were still there. Mr. and Mrs. Lyons say the city plans to leave one bombed-out square as it is — as a reminder of what war is like. In general, Mr. and Mrs. Lyons say, the attitude of the people of Munich is good. The Hoffbrau Haus, famous rathskeller, is bigger and better than ever, they say.

From Munich the party drove through the Bavarian Alps to Innsbruck, along the Inn River. Then the tour went to Cortina, a bee-hive of building activity. The town will be the site of next winter's Olympics. In Venice the tourists listened to concerts on the lagoons; at the Lido they took a warm swim. In Florence the students got a glimpse of some of the great works of Italian masters. After two days of sightseeing in Rome, the group went to the Tivoli Gardens and their many fountains. The group attended a performance of "Mephistopheles" at The Baths of Caracalla. The outdoor stage there is said to be the biggest in the world, having an area of approximately 6,000 square feet. Sorrento and Capri were the next two stopping places. Then the group went to Paris, final point on the tour. In Paris the group had the opportunity to visit the headquarters of NATO and SHAPE.
