Constitution Week Exhibit Now At Library

By MYRA LAUTERER

The University Library has on display this week, in the main lobby, an exhibition in celebration of Constitution Week, proclaimed by President Eisenhower as the period from last Saturday through this Friday. The Library joins other institutions in honoring the 168th birthday of the Constitution of the United States, signed on September 17, 1787.

Against a patriotic motif, the display presents a facsimile of the document, pictures of some of the signers, and books relating to the formation and evaluation of the Constitution. Included are two foreign treatises, written in French and Spanish; a British book comparing our Constitution with the British Constitution, and American work printed in 1806, and a plea to North Carolina for Federal Union written in 1788.

President Eisenhower's Proclamation is the direct result of the efforts of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The Senate Concurrent Resolution asking for the resolution was introduced by Senator William F. Knowland of California at the request of the D.A.R. (Senator Knowland is to speak here next week in the Carolina Forum.) The National Defense Committee and many individuals wrote each Senator and member of Congress urging passage of the resolution.

AAUW To Meet Tuesday Night

The first fall meeting of the Chapel Hill Branch of the American Association of University Women will be held in the Morehead Building faculty lounge Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Warner Wells, assistant professor of surgery at the University Medical School, speaker for the evening, will be introduced by Mrs. Frances Gray Patton, author of "Good Morning Miss Dove."

Dr. Wells will discuss "Hiroshima Diary," the first eye-witness account of the bombing of Hiroshima.

Coffee will be served from 7:30-8:00 for all present members of AAUW and those interested in the organization. Mrs. A. S. Lineberger will be hostess.

This meeting is open to the public and there will be no business discussion.
