

General Hunting Season Opens With 'Ideal' Day On Thursday

The general hunting season got a good start with the beautifully crisp and clear fall weather on Thursday.

While no extraordinary individual bags of game were reported hereabouts by the state's game protectors, they said that the opening day seemed "ideal" from the standpoint of hunting conditions. A number of local sportsmen participated in the one-week special deer hunt that ended at Butner on Saturday.

District Game Protector Bob Logan said that hunters seemed "very much better this year" about abiding by wildlife conservation laws, although a few violators were caught on the initial day.

Rabbit hunters were reported out in particularly large numbers during the past few days, and their take of game is understood to have been good. The game protectors report there are more wild turkeys in this area than there were last year, but to date none have been reported killed. Near Butner, however, at least two were downed on Thursday.

Based on reports from growers as of October 1, a pecan crop of 725,000 pounds is estimated for North Carolina this year.

ANNUAL THANKSGIVING DONATIONS—Pupils in the 19 class rooms at Chapel Hill Elementary School had their annual Thanksgiving chapel program Wednesday at which they brought baskets of food for needy families in the County. Above, arranging the display, are John Bagby and Charlie Shaffer (right), President of the School Student Council. The devotional of the chapel program was led by Miss Elizabeth Seawell's class while Mrs. E. R. Rankin's class gave an original playlet.

Check Forger Hearing Is Set In Court Today

An admitted check forger on several local stores was to be given a hearing in Recorder's Court this morning.

Nabbed in Bridgeport, Connecticut last Tuesday afternoon, Curtis Oldham, fugitive from police here, readily confessed that he'd cashed worthless checks totalling over $100. The victims were Williams Pure Oil Service Station, Fowler's Food Store, and the Sherwin-Williams Paint Store.

A former resident of Chapel Hill, the 32-year-old Negro had been visiting here several weeks when he cashed the checks under an assumed name about 10 days ago. He took a bus to Bridgeport Sunday night and police, learning on a tip of his departure, wired the Bridgeport police to pick him up when he arrived there. A detective arrested him there as he stepped off the bus.

Chapel Hill Police Patrolmen Charlie Byrd and Charlie Edmonds were sent there the next afternoon in a police car, picked up their prisoner early Wednesday morning, and started back immediately.

They said Oldham was quite cooperative and admitted writing the bogus checks, though he claimed to have been intending to get back here, too.

ed to have been intending to get back here, too. Byrd.
