more critical of ourselves and our own faults and more charitable toward others?

The last pair goes to the very heart of religion. Do we have deeper and more frequent communion with God, more reality in our worship, both public and private, greater consciousness of His presence with us at other times?

Yuletide Open House Is Held At Basnights

An Open House in the Christmas theme was held yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Basnight, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Basnight, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Basnight and Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hoft, Jr., at the Greenhill Farm home of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Basnight on the new Greensboro Highway.

Receiving at the front door were Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Basnight. The foyer was decorated with arrangements of red carnations and greenery.

Mrs. B. A. Hoft, Jr., received in the living room which was decorated with silver leaves, blue candles and pink carnations. Guests were invited into the dining room by Mrs. Jesse S. Basnight and were served by Mrs. H. L. Weeks, Mrs. Musella Wagner and Mrs. H. S. Hogan. The table was covered with a pink silk cloth. Pink carnations, silver leaves and candelabra completed the decorations.

Goodbyes were said by Mrs. W. D. Basnight. About 250 guests called during the afternoon.

Seed of the new tobacco variety, Dixie Bright 244, will be available through normal dealer channels in North Carolina for next season's plantings.

Garden Ramblings

— AROUND CHAPEL HILL — By William J. Brown

With Christmas just around the corner most of us have last minute shopping to be done. Flowers and plants are welcome gifts, not only for that mythical person "who has everything" but also for the friend who is crazy enough to prefer plants above everything else.

The local florists are well supplied with flowers and plants to suit all tastes. First and perhaps foremost is the traditional Poinsettia. The botanical name is Euphorbia Pulcherrima but the plant is named popularly for J. R. Poinsett who was U. S. Ambassador to Mexico and discovered the native plant there in 1828. The Poinsettias that I have seen this year are very fine specimens and the white ones add variety.

The Belgian Azaleas are old established favorites as potted plants, and one of the important factors for their popularity is their lasting quality. The azaleas that I saw in the florists here were pink and red varieties. Other potted plants here are cyclamen and gloxinias.

The potted plants are always delivered from the florist with the pot in a "party dress" and they certainly could not look more attractive than when disguised by colored tinfoil and ribbon. My personal reaction, and this is entirely individualistic, is to strip off the tinfoil after a day so that I can admire the plant, out of its gift wrapping. If you object to looking at an ordinary plant pot then you can give the pot a quick coat of white paint that will not detract the eye from the plant.

For an extra special treat you can give spring flowers, either pots of bulbs or cut blooms—jonquills, daffodils and the cheerful blue Dutch Iris, Wedgewood, Roses, an-
