The Chapel Hill School District will be able to meet its primary building construction needs the next two vears - if current costs estimates prove accurate.

This appears possible on a $272,595.59 break-down (shown along-$623,404.41 side) of money available for the local School Board. However, the Board was cautioned that all cost estimates were based on the prices of today, while building expense. may very well continue to rise. Auditoriums Excepted

While no formal action has been taken on the building proposals, it is expected that within the next 18 months construction can be started on five new building projects at an estimate cost of $620,200.

These are the new elementary school off Airport Rd., bids for which are to be called for in a few weeks; additional classrooms at Northside School, on which construction is also imminent; new shop building at Lincoln High also an immediate prospect; an addition for the Chapel Hill High raised during the term of office and administration building at Chapel Shop, and a home economics and
